A SERIOUS REBELLION. The End of the Nicaraguan Outbrea

is not Yet.

Or ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE)

NEW YORK, March 23.—A local paper says that the revolution in Nicaraua, according to intelligence received. per says that the revolution in Nicara-gua, according to intelligence received in New York through private channels, is more serious than dispatches from that country would indicate. The strict press censorship established by Presi-dent Zelaya renders it impossible for news of any character whatever, ex-cept what is favorable to the govern-ment, to be made public.

news of any character whatever, exept what is favorable to the government, to be made public.

Two facts, however, seem to be well established: First, that Zelaya is not suppressing the rebellion, and, second, that the Honduran troops which arrived in Nicaragua on Friday last as the supposed allies of Zelaya, are quite as likely to aid the rebels as to act in concert with the government troops. The first of these facts is based upon the almost certain knowledge that the revolutionists have not lost ground; that they are confident of success, since in every engagement they have been the aggressors; that they have the moral and material support of the great majority of the Liberal party, which placed Zelaya in power, and that the government forces have maintained from the beginning a purely defensive attitude.

gent government. If Honduras espouses Baca's cause, the latter, it is believed, will become victorious, since his troops are armed with modern guns and animated by sentiments of the lottlest patriotism, inasmuch as they are fighting for constitutional liberty and to prevent the alleged dictatorship of Zelhya. Without Honduras's aid the result is likely to be in doubt for several months.

Another element of uncertainty is the influence which the Salvadorean Sea Commission may exert upon the contending factions. It is generally believed their efforts will result in failure. Shrewd observers of political events in Central America are of the opinion that all five of the republics may become embroiled unless a peaceful solution is reached within a few weeks.

THE COTTON CROP

Jerome Hill of St. Louis Predicts

NEW YORK, March 23.—Jerome Hill of St. Louis, one of the best known cot to dealers in the South, is in this city. He is the owner of several plantations and has made cotton a life study. Asked for an estimate of the probable extent of the next American crop, Hill said: "You might as well ask me how high the high-water mark of the Mississippi Dirac will be this spelms. the high-water mark of the Mississippi River will be this spring. My guess, however, is that there will be an in-crease of about 10 per cent, in the plant-ing and that under average conditions there should be about eight million bales raised in the United States. Some talk of about nine million bales, but there never has been more than 9,000,000 taken from the fields."

What Ex-Gov. Lionel A. Sheldon Says-Second California Congress District Convention-Round-up at New York-Silverites.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TIMES.) SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.—(Spe cial Dispatch.) The Chronicle's special from Washington says:

"An interesting and significant bit of political news was received here who went to California in the interest of Allison, is coming back East somewhat disheartened. It is known that he telegraphed to a friend here today in California and on the entire Pacific Coast was very strong and growing, and he feared that the tide could not

"Ex-Gov. Lionel A. Sheldon is here on business. He said McKinley was daily becoming more formidable in California, and he would certainly have a large and enthusiastic following on the delegation.

"Richard Kerens of St. Louis, Mo., a member of the Republican National Committee, is in the city. He is on his way to New York on business. He is fairly bubbling over with McKinley enthusiasm and in conversation about the situation of the campaign, said Kinley is already an assured fact. It is now bordering on the domain of nomination by acclamation. This popular uprising is growing in strength and vigor every day. It is unjust to say that emissaries in McKinley's in-terest have been sent out over the country, for this could not have been done. No such means are, or have been, at his disposal. I can say for Missouri that not even a postage stamp has been used to influence public sentiment. It came naturally. The State is absolutely unanimous for him and there is no second choice."

THE NEW YORK ROUND-UP. NEW YORK, March 23.—J. Sloat Fas-set and S. E. Payne were among today's arrivals of prominent Republicans who arrivals of prominent Republicans who will participate in the State convention tomorrow. Fassett is actively working up the Presidential candidacy of Gov. Morton. Payne is said to be slated for an elector-at-large. T. C. Platt kept to his room all the forencon on the plea of indisposition. He was able, however, to give audience to several leaders from the interior of the State. It is said by those who should know that the platform will deal only with national affairs, and that no mention of State issues will be incorporated.

Adherents of the McKinley boom circulated among the delegates tonight and induced many of them to attend the mass-meeting held in McKinley's honor. The fact that Gov. Morton had not only signed the Raines Liquor-tax Bill, but had also indorsed it in a long brief, made some of the city members rather willing to be approached by the agents of the Ohio candidate, and many expressions of disgruntlement were heard. The State committee met at the Fifth Avenue Hotel tonight to appoint temporary officers for the convention. Cornelius R. Parsons of Rochester was named as temporary chairman. Congressman G. H. Southwick of Albany will be made permanent chairman.

It has been decided by the leaders that there shall be no mention in the platform of anything connected with State affairs, except the indorsing of the administration of Gov. Morton. It has been thought that it would perhaps be well to have a separate motion indorsing the Raines Bill, but the leaders are afraid of a demonstration upon the subject. The platform, which is in Senator Lexow's keeping tonight, is quite brief. It favors a sound currency on a gold basis; reaffirms the tariff policy of protection, but asks that it be so guarded as not to prove monopolistic in any sense, while still protecting American industries. This, in brief, besides the indorsement, is all that is to be said in the resolutions.

It was finally decided early tonight that Comptroller Roberts could not go as an alternate because of the Eric county delegation's attitude. Ex-Senator Daniel McMillan was slated to go in his place, but this did not seem to stop the trouble, for it was announced this afternoon that if the above fact was made public Eric county delegates would renounce Mr. Morton, and would not even promise him support at the first-bailot. The slate, as arranged, with the addition of McMillan, will probably not be changed.

It was decided tonight that the electors-at-large should be E. H. Butler of Buffalo and Gen. Benjamin Tracy of Brooklyn. Each of the Congress districts wil

HIS NEW YORK BOOM

HIS NEW YORK BOOM

NEW YORK, March 23.—The Presidential boom in New York city of William McKinley was launched at Cooper Union tonight. The hall was well filled.

Maj. Lovett Jerome called the meeting to order. He said it was useless for the machine politicians to disregard the returns that were coming in from all parts of the country favoring McKinley. The latter was the enemy of the bosses, and not their tool.

Maj. Jerome introduced as chairman of the meeting Gen. Wager Swayne. The meeting, he said, had been called to make plain to the people of this State and throughout the country and to the delegates to the convention about to be held that the second choice for President of the United States was William McKinley. (Cheers.) Gov. Morton, he said, had rendered valuable services to the State.

said that the Governor deserved to be cheered, and that the machine in the Republican party was none of his making. It had been hoped that the name of Gov. Morton would go before the convention without opposition, but it appeared that the sentiment of the country was for McKinley. Gen. Swayne introduced as the next speaker Senator Frank D. Pavey of this city, who spoke of the general depression under the Democratic administration.

Resolutions were adopted declaring the assembly in favor of and also piedging the members to aid in the nomination of McKinley.

A committee of fifteen on organization was selected.

AUSTIN (Tex.,) March 23.—After an all-day wrangle to arrange a combination between the Allison and Reed men, the whole business was knocked into a cocked hat late tonight by the Allison men, with Cuney at their head, announcing that they would make the fight singly and alone for Allison, and for Cuney as temporary chairman. The Reed men are apparently badly flustrated by this action. McKinley's forces say they will fight to a finish, and this will probably be fatal to the Reed men, although some seem to think that they will combine with the McKinley men if assured that a divided delegation will be sent.

John F. Kidder of Nevada county presided, and George P. Royster of Sacramento acted as secretary. The Congress Committee had evidently arranged a programme, for it was in session but a short time. It was decided to practically leave everything in the hands of the county central committees. ABEILLE'S "MASH."

ERS. DEACON RETURNS TO AMER-ICA ON BUSINESS.

as the Heroine of a Disgracefu Tragedy-Will not Talk of Her

NEW YORK, March 23.—(Special Dispatch.) ' der her maiden name of Baldwin, ars. Edward Parker Deacon, daughter of the late Admiral Baldwin and divorced wife of L. P. Deacon, who shot and killed Emile Abeille in Franc four years ago, returned to America to-day on the French steamer La Normandie. Those passengers who read upor the passenger list the name of Mme. F. Baldwin and femme de chambre, saw merely a beautiful, vivacious brunette with Parisian mannerisms. They did not recognize in their charming op-posite at the table a woman whose indiscretions cost one man his life and another his liberty for many weeks.

Mrs. Deacon would not say anything regarding her plans in America, but it is understood that her trip is a business one and that she will return to Franc as soon as her affairs will permit.

It will be remembered that Deacor shot Abeille in his wife's rooms at Ho tel Splendide at Cannes. He had gon away, ostensibly for several weeks returned secretly and discovered wife in compromising relations with the "masher." who had already aroused his jealousy by persistent at-tentions to his wife. the custody of his children.

Mrs. Deacon, after the tragedy, spent

THOSE MILEAGE RATES. A Complaint by the Canadian Pacific

CHICAGO, March 23.-The Canadia, Pacific and the "Soo" line have made a request of Chairman Caldwell that he cause the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific to take out certain rates that were in effect when the agreement of the Transcontinental Aslation was formed, and of which the tinuance of the rates were cognizant at the time of forming the agreement. Chairman Caldwell has asked for argu-

the time of forming the agreements on both sides.

The rates to which the Canadian Pacific and the "Soo" object are the mileage rates from Minneapolis to Pacific Coast points. The Great Northern and the Northern Pacific say they cannot take out the rates so long as the Southern Pacific and the Oregen Short Line keep them in effect. The mileage rates of 2½ cents per mile are a decided reduction from the regular tariff rates. The regular tariff from Minneapolis to Seattle is $60 and the mileage is $45.43.

The Canadian Pacific and the "Soo" have asked the chairman that while these mileage rates are kept in effect the regular rate be made $44.40 to all North Pacific Coast points, taking the regular tariff rate of $60. The chairman has asked that the arguments be in his hands by April 1.

Speaker Reed Face to Face with a Dilemma.

prise—Resolutions Sent to Con-ference and No Opposition Made—Mills's Wants.

WASHINGTON, March 23 .- (Special Dispatch.) The Senate Committee on Pacific Reilroads will tomorrow appoint a sub-committee consisting of Senators Frye, Brice and Wolcott, to confer with a sub-committee of the House Pacific Railroads Committee and decide on a funding bill which shall be reported to both houses. As the Senate committee, with the exception of Senator Morgan, has practically de-cided on what the bill ought to be, and as the House committee is in about the same condition, it is probable that inside of two weeks, a funding bill not very dissimilar from Huntington's proposition will be on the calendar of ach House

Tomorrow there will be a hearing of the House committee and Representative Barham will submit some facts which he has gathered with reference to the doings of the Railroad Commission in California and to the rates which have been charged by the South-ern Pacific. He will produce a letter of Commissioner Larue, showing the facts in the matter of the action of the commissioners directing that rates should be reduced 25 per cent. and will endeavor to show some errors in the statement of Traffic Manager Stubbs when before the committee.

An opportunity will be given to Speaker Reed to show whether he is willing to accord representation in the House Committee on Pacific Railroads to one whose sentiments are against the funding proposition. Congressman Boatner of Louisiana, who was a member of the committee, lost his seat the other day when the House decided against him in a contested election case. Mr. Boatner was perhaps only lukewarm in support of funding and Speaker Reed has been accused of fixing the committee so that it would contain no member who would be ar-duous and able in opposing an extension of the debt.

A movement is on foot to press Speaker Reed to appoint in Mr. Boatner's place a Democrat representing the anti-railroad sentiment as held by a part of the California delegation. One of the Republica members of the delegation will tomorrow ask Speaker Reed to appoint Congressman Maguire of San Francisco in Mr. Boatner's place. This would, of course, assure them a minority report from the committee, and those who are interested in Mr. Reed's Presidential aspirations who want him to carry California in the convention, will urge that this request be granted.

The House spent most of the day considering the Curtis bill to abolish the death penalty in all cases where it is prescribed in the Federal statutes (sixty in number,) save in cases of murder and rape, under sections 5339 and 5345 of the Revised Statutes, where the jury might qualify the verdict the jury might qualify the verdict "without capital punishment." The bill makes no changes in the penalty that can be inflicted by military and naval can be inflicted by military and naval court-martial. Among the crimes now punishable by death abolished by the bill are murder and robbery on the high seas, accessory before the fact to murder, piracy, etc., on the high seas, destruction of yessels at sea, arson of vessels of war, etc. The bill failed to pass for want of a quorum.

The Senate bill authorizing the leasing of educational lands in Arizona, which was a modification of the bill passed by the House over the President's veto some time ago, was passed, as also was several bridge bills.

"Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that the President of the United States is hereby directed to request the government of Spain to authorize the people of Cuba, subject to the sovereignty of Spain, to institute such local government as they may wish, and invest it with such powers as they may think necessary to secure to the people of Cuba the right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

"Sec. 2. In case Spain shall refuse to grant to the inhabitants of Cuba the rightful power of self-government, then the President of the United States is hereby directed to take possession of the Island of Cuba with the military and naval forces of the United States, and hold the same until the people of Cuba can organize a government deriving its just powers from the consent of the governed, arm and equip such military forces as may be necessary to protect them from invasion."

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, March 23, — SEN-ATE.—Senator Blackburn's return to the Senate today after the exciting and fruitless Senatorial contest before the Kentucky Legislature, was signalled by an unusual demonstration by his colleagues. On the Senator's desk was the largest and most elaborate floral design ever brought to the Senate, rising twelve feet from the floor and overhanging the desks of Senators Walthall and Vest, on either side. The main design represented the coat-of-arms of Kentucky, with two huge dolls clasping hands as the central figures, around which was worked the State motto, "United we stand, divided we fall." Above this was a large horseshee of La France and Pearle roses, while below and around were great sheaves of oak leaves and illy of the valley. The whole was topped with the wide-spreading branches of American Beauty roses. The tribute came from Mr. Blackburn's Senatorial associates, Several other large designs were from personal friends. Senator Blackburn entered the chamber shortly after the session opened, and was warmly greeted by his associates.

In presenting petitions from Edward Everett Hale, Julia Ward Howe, the faculties of Yale and Williams colleges, and many distinguished public men and scientists, Senator Gallinger showed the heavy mortality from pulmonary diseases, and urged that the government might well give attention to saving human life.

When Senator Sherman brought forward the Cuban resolutions, there was an animated debate as to securing a final vote. Senator Sulton, there was an animated debate as to securing a final vote. Senator Sherman responded that the committee desired a vote. and he thought it remarkable, with the war proceeding in Cuba, that the question could not be speedily acted on.

Senator Sherman responded that the resolutions and had accepted the House resolutions. "And I venture to say," proceeded Senator Platt, "that not five Senators approve the House resolutions mow before us."

The Senator suggested to Senator Sherman and his associates that they recede from their agreement to the House resolutions, which the Senators of the Senators of the Senators of the House resolutions. "Till we had any assurance," said Senator Sherman, design ever brought to the Senate, ris-ing twelve feet from the floor and over-hanging the desks of Senators Walthall did not want, and present something more acceptable.

"If we had any assurance," said Senator Sherman, that the Senate would accept and dispose of the subject in another form, then we would be willing to accept the suggestion."

Senator Platt went on to say that he could speak only for himself, yet it must be apparent that Senators did not wish to adopt resolutions which were contradictory in their terms.

"I suggest to the chairman of the committee" said Senator Hoar, rising and addressing Senator Sherman, "that he ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to a disagreement to the conference report, thus sending the subject back to the conference committee,"

"Eut why not vote?" insisted Sena-for Sherman.

Senator Hoar said the whole subject sould be dealt with in two minutes, if Senator Sherman would ask unanimous consent to recommit them.

"Then," said Senator Sherman, derisively, "I will make the motion to test the question. This colloquy proceeded out of order, as Senator Palmer of Illinois had the floor for a speech against the Cuban resolutions, and insisted on going on. resolutions, and insisted on going on. He yielded, however, to allow Senator Sherman to give the following formal notice: "I now give notice that in or-der to expedite action on this subject, and in order to dispose of the ques-tion. I will move to recommit the pending resolutions to the confer

ing resolutions to the conference committee."

As Senator Palmer had the floor, Senator Sherman did not secure immediate action in his motion.

Senator Palmer urged the unnecessarily offensive and contradictory terms of the House resolutions. They embraced a needless threat of intervention, which, if executed, meant intervention, by war. The Senator spoke of the unorganized condition of the Cubans. This brought out protests from Senator Morgan and Senator Call. The former read the proclamation of Cisneros, president of the insurgents, together with a letter from Crosby S. Noyes of the Vashington Star, giving assurances of the authenticity of the documents.

Senator Morgan said he approved every word of that splendid appeal of Senator Mills offered a joint resolu-every word of that splendid appeal of Cisneros.

Senator Mills offered a joint resolution, after which he said he would speak on the resolution tomorrow.

Senator George of Mississippi spoke in opposition to the resolutions.

At 2 o'clock there was a lull in the speeches, whereupon Senator Sherman sought to secure a vote on his resolution to recommit the resolutions to the conference committee. A vote was about to be taken, when Senator Allen offered a speech. Many Senators urged him to wait, as the Sherman motion would dispose of the subject for the present. Senator Allen insisted on going on, and the vote was not ordered.

Senator Allen said that if the United States stood by while Spain applied the knife to the throats of the Cubans, we would be justly chargeable by the world with impotency and cowardice. He ridiculed the waning patriotism of Senators. At first Senators had "fallen over each other" to support the resolutions. Then the Senator from Maine (Mr. Hale) had sounded the signal for retreat.

"And now" concluded Senator Allen, "the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Sherman) moves to recommit. It looks as though he joined in the retreat, and this will be the last of his resolution."

As soon as Senator Allen closed Senator Sherman pressed his motion to recommit. There was no word of opposition, and the presiding officer, Senator Bacon, put the question. Not more than twenty Senators were present. There was a chorus of years and no nays, and the motion prevailed. No request for a roll-call was made, and the Senator Immediately turned to other business. The recommittal came so quickly that the crowds did not realize what had been done until the clerk began reading

TRENTON, (N. J.,) March 23,-Cha

"It is impossible to escape the convic-tion that the defendant's suspicions of his wife's infidelity were not destitute of foundation, in questionable circum-stances at least; but I fail to find any judicial precedent which holds that un-der a statute similar to that of this State, a husband may with impunity be guilty of the desertion of his wife, merely because he believes her, even under gravely suspicious circumstances, to have been guilty of adultery.

"Desertion," the Chancellor holds, "is justified only when it is shown by clear and satisfactory when the desertion.

and satisfactory proof that the desert-ing party has been so offended against ing party has been so offended agains as to authorize at his instance a decree such a scandalous and disgraceful charge."

The Chancellor finds that there was no collusion to secure a divorce. In the decree, reference to the testimony is made, but the Chancellor does not mention Hallett Alsop Borrowe by name. "One B," a neighbor, however, is mentioned as having been names as correspondent in the suit brought by Drayton against his wife. Borrowe was corespondent in that suit.

In reviewing the testimony the Chancellor says it appeared that Drayton questioned his wife's fidelity while they were living at Bernsrdsville, in this State, and that she then went to be father's home. This was in October, 1891. In November a partial reconciliation was effected between Mr. and Mrs. Drayton. They then went to England. While there the estrangement widened, and Mrs. Drayton, according to her own testimony, became unhappy and miserable and determined that separation was necessary. Having no one in whom to confide she telegraphed to America for "B," and he met her at a London hotel, where arrangements had been made for her to meet an American lawyer. whom to confide she telegraphed to America for "B." and he met her at a London hotel, where awangements had been made for her to meet an American lawyer. The lawyer was late in arriving, and Mrs. Drayton and "B" went lato another room, where they had lunch, a waiter being in the room with them. While they were in this room Drayton and two men, presumably detectives, entered and identified her, afterward departing. After this, in accordance with an arrangement between her lawyer and her husband's lawyer. Mrs. Drayton went to Wimbledon to bid her children good-bye. She then went to Paris to meet her father, who persuaded her to seek a reconciliation for the sake of the children.

The Chancellor says he is satisfied that this effort at reconciliation was made in good faith by Mrs. Drayton, but was rejected by her husband, because of his continued belief in her unfaithfulness. He points out that the legal time for bringing a suit for desertion having elapsed, the desertion was willful, continued and obsitrate. The only point, he says, was whether the desertion was justifiable. He refers to the fact that the husband's suit for divorce on the ground of adultery was not brought until June, 18%, and that since that time no charge of adultery has been adduced, and in the present suit the husband made no oharge of adultery, but sontented himself with a denial of the desertion.

"Resolved, that the Senate, the House of Representatives concurring, hereby expresses its earnest desire and hope that Cuba may soon become a free, independent and republican government, and the friendly offices of the United States should be offered by the President to the Spanish government to secure this result."

The Legislative Appropriation Bill was pending when, at 5:15 o'clock, the Senate went into executive session, and soon afterward adjourned.

An attempt was made to pass the Curtis bill abolishing the penalty in cretain cases and permitting jurors in cases of rape and murder to bring in verdicts qualified "without the death penalty." vision in the Naval Appropriation Bill for three drydocks to be built at Algiers, La., Mare Island, Cal., and Portsmouth, N. H., was reconsidered today by the Naval Affairs Committee of the House. A motion to drop these projects for a time was made and carried by a decisive vote of 7 to 4. The reason for this step is mainly found in the condition of the treasury which the Republicans believe does not justify the expenditures at this time.

It was also decided to have one of the four new battleships built on the Pacific Coast, together with one of the torpedo-boats. Another of the fifteen torpedo-boats to be constructed on the Guif of Mexico and another on the Mississippi River. The usual provision will be made, however, that the cost shall not be excessive and, in case it is, the President may have these vessels constructed elsewhere than at the points named. The five larger torpedo-boats, it was decided, must attain a speed of twenty-five knots an hour, while the others must be of the greatest speed possible, no limit being fixed. The committee has accepted an invitation to witness the launching of the Iowa at Philadelphia next Saturday.

sent, and Justice Field Also Has Issue Outlined.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.) WASHINGTON, March 23.-A decis on was rendered by the Supreme Court of the United States today in the case of Theodore F. Brown, involving the right of the court to compel an answer by the witness to questions in interstate commerce matters, notwithstand-ing he may plead self-incrimination as a result of the answer. The decision vas opposed to Brown's contention that he was protected by the Constitution from this requirement, and the decision of the court below was affirmed. The opinion was handed down by Justice Brown. Justices Field, Shiras, Gray and White dissented, holding that the constitutional provision was sufficient to relieve Brown from the requirements of an answer.

constitutional provision was sufficient to relieve Brown from the requirements of an answer.

In announcing his opinion, Justice Brown said the question involved was, whether the law of 1893 specifically relieving witnesses in interstate commerce cases from prosecution when they reveal facts which might incriminate themselves, operates to take from witnesses in such cases the privilege of silence as guaranteed by the Constitution, and the conclusion was that it did. He said this act was in the nature of a general ammesty in such cases, and had been so regarded and upheld in half-alozen decisions in the State courts. Replying to the objections that while the act served as a protection to witnesses against prosecution, it did not shield from the disgrace involved in confessing a criminal act, Justice Brown said it did not, nor was it contemplated by a provision in the Constitution that one should be shielded. He added in response to objections that the law would operate to protect a witness from prosecution in the State courts, the Federal statutes being superior to those of the States, that the latter statutes are the supreme law of the land and apply in the State sa well as in the Federal courts. He also advanced the opinion that in this case the refusal of Brown to give his testimony was due rather to his desire to shield others than himself. As Brown was only the auditor of the road his duties were not of such a character that he could be held criminally liable for any violation of the law.

WHAT SPAIN WILL DO.

NEW YORK, March 24.—A dispatch to the World from Madrid says:

"It is an open secret that the Spanish government will be much pleased if President Cleveland sends a message to Congress regarding American losses in consequences of the rebellion in Cuba. Such a message will not only give the Madrid government a long-desired opportunity to take official notice of what has been going on of late in the United States and Cuba, but it will furnish a pretext for taking the following steps:

"First—Sending a note clearly stating to the United States government. Spain's intention to put down the rebellion in Cuba exactly as Americad did the rebellion in the Southern States—that is to say, without tolerating any foreign interference, even in the form of mediation, and without taking the rebellion in Cuba exactly as Americad did the rebellion in the Southern States—that is to say, without tolerating any foreign interference, even in the form of mediation, and without taking the case involved an alleged incompatibility between that it cause for the fifth amendment to the Constitution which declares no person of the send the time he time he take the bear of the did, in June, 1894, and the act of Congress of February 11, 1893. "The danger," he said, "of extending the principle announced in Councilman vs. Hitchcock is that the privilege may be put forward for a sentimental requirement for a sentimental requirement of the real purpose of the witness against a friendly power.

"Second—Sending a memorandum to foreign governments, especially European powers, setting forth that Spaln is the foreign government of the law, and has no right form prosecution would satisfy the demand of the clause in question.

"The danger," he said, "of extending the principle announced in Councilman shielding his own good name, to be made the tool of others who are desirous of seeking shelter behind this privilege."

In the present case, he said, it was clear that Brown was not the chief or even substantial offender against the law, and that his privilege was claimed for the purpose of shielding the rail-way or its officers from answering a charge of having violated its provisions. To say, notwithstanding his immunity from punishment, he would incur personal disgrace from answering these questions, seems too much like an abuse of language to be worthy of serious consideration. But, even if this were true, he would still he compelled to answer, if the facts sought to be elucidated were material to the issue.

If, as was justly observed in the opinion of the court below, a witness standing in Brown's position were at liberty to set up an immunity from testifying, the enforcement of the interstate commerce law or other analagous acts wherein it is for, the interest of both parties to conceal their misdoings, would become impossible, since it is only from the mouths of those having knowledge of the contracts that the facts can be ascertained.

On the point of shielding a witness from disgrace, he said: "A person who commits a criminal act is bound to contemplate the consequences of exposure to his good name, and ought not to call upon the courts to protect that which he has himself esteemed to be of such little value. The safety and welfare of an entire community should not be put into the scale against the reputation of a self-confessed criminal, who ought not, either in justice or in good morals, to refuse to disclose that which may be of great public utility, in order that his neighbors may think well of him. The design of the constitutional privilege is not to aid the witness in vindicating his character, but to protect him against being compelled to furnish evidence to convict him of a criminal charge. If he secure legal immunity from prosecution, the possible impairment of his good name is a penalty whic

Justice Field also read a dissenting opinion. He held that the amnesty granted in the Congressional act of 1893 was in effect a pardon, and said that only the President could exercise the function of pardoning. He contended that the Constitution's provision was intended as much for the purpose of preventing a disgrace a man might bring upon himself by crimmating himself, while on the witness stand, as for his protection against prosecution. He contended that the law in question did not abrogate the legislation because the State did not abrogate any protection conferred by the Constitution and, second, because the statute does not purport to abrogate the offense, but only provides protection against any proceeding to punish it.

"The legislational safeguards for security and liberty," said he, "cannot be thus dealt with. They must stand as the legislation has desired them. They cannot be set aside and replaced by something else, on the ground that the substitute will probably answer the same purpose. The citizen is entitled to the very thing which the language of the Constitution assures him."

The case was advanced on the docket of the Supreme Court on the motion of the Attorney-General, made at the instance of the Interstate Commerce Commission. It was considered a test case, and the claims set forth in a letter written for the commission that a large number of similar cases must wait upon its final decision by the court. The case came to the Supreme Court on an appeal taken by Brown from the decision of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania refusing to grant a writ of habeas corpus, and arose out of a proceeding by the Interstate Commerce Commission against the Allegheny Valley Railroad Company, of which Brown is an officer.

Long, in reply, said the bill was only intended to give the security necessary to the farmers. Diseases, he explained, remained latent for a long time. Only recently there was an outbreak of pleuro-pneumonia in England and a whole herd had to be killed.

Rt. Hon. A. J. Mundella, Radical member for Sheffield, and president of the Board of Trade in the former Liberal ministry, thought it would become necessary to exclude Canada from the operation of the bilk.

Balfour, government leader, spoke in favor of the bill, repeating the points in the argument made by Long, its author. The bill was then read a second time, receiving 224 votes.

Following the discussion, papers were discussed by the government relating to the importation of cattle. The Board of Husbandry, writing to Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, on March 16, repeat their opinion that the proposals contained in Long's bill are not more likely to prejudice the developments of the Canadian cattle trade than they have the trade in cattle from the United States.

BALLINGTON IS SET.

WILL NOT AGAIN COMMAND THE SALVATION ARMY.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.)

NEW YORK, March 22.—Ballington and Mrs. Booth issued a statement, through Lieut.-Col. Glenn today to the effect that they will under no circumstances take command of the Salvation Army in the United States. This was prompted by a report from London that efforts are being made to induce the Booths to accept their old command. The statement follows:

"Commander and Mrs. Booth will not for a moment consider any proposition Commander and Mrs. Booth will not for a moment consider any proposition whatsoever made to them from the international headquarters of the Salvation Army. While Commander Booth will not refuse to see his sister as a sister, both he and Mrs. Booth are positively and finally determined to enter into no discussion and listen to no propositon concerning the reconsideration of their position. Their step was taken definitely, and prayerfully when tion of their position. Their step was taken definitely, and prayerfully, when they publicly, two weeks ago, committed themselves to the starting of a new movement, and no advances whatsoever will lead either of them, or the officers who are at their side, to depart from the declarations they have made. The international headquarters is perfectly aware of the resolutions which underlie the whole question, and make it impossible for Commander and Mrs. Booth to continue under their orders."

The leaders of the new movement claim the London officers are playing a trick; that they talk reconciliation to prevent many American officers from leaving the Salvation Army to join in the new movement.

prevent many American officers from leaving the Salvation Army to join in the new movement.

At the Fourteenth-street headquarters Col. Eadie received a telegram from London on Sunday saying that the orders to bid farewell were not the result of anything he may have done in his pursuit as an officer in the army. Col. Eadie said there seemed to be a sentiment prevailing, for which there was no reasonable excuse, that he had been a disturbing element in the army. He did not say why he had been recalled. He stated, however, that he should be here to attend the grand reception in Carnegie Hall to the Booth-Tuckers. This meeting has been postponed a week until April 7, a cable-gram having been received which says Commander Booth-Tucker disembarked from the steamer to the tender and returned to Southampton. Mrs. Booth-Tucker, however, is aboard the steamer. Word was received at the Bible-house headquarters today that Capt. Booth and wife had joined the "Volunteers."

CHANGE OF TIME AT CHICAGO. CHICAGO, March 23.—About 150 officers of the Salvation Army were present at a meeting held here today. Commissioner Eva Booth addressed the meeting, which was behind closed doors, on the question of loyalty to Commission

Gen. Booth.

India and all the world," said Miss Booth, referring to the rebellion in the Bast, "but anything more disgraceful

The cheers which greeted this outburst of the Commissioner augured poorly for the success of an attempt to sever the American army from the main branch in America. Secretary Fielding of the Northwestern branch of the army said there was not a single officer present at the meeting who would be disloyal to Gen. Booth. Every one of the 450 officers present were soild against secession.

Train-robbers' Leader Cuts Hi hroat in Jail—Mrs. Davidson's Trial Begun—Child Killed by a Locomotive.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TIMES! VANCOUVER, (B. C.,) March 23.— Special Dispatch.) The steamer War-tmoo, which arrived today from Ausrimoo, which arrived today from Australia, brings news of startiling tragedies in the French penal colony of New Caledonis. The colony is terrorized by a mysterious criminal, supposed to have escaped from the authorities. His deeds resemble those of the Whitechapel murderer, "Jack the Ripper." His crimes are revolting. He evades large squads of police, guards and detectives with the greatest ease, and commits horrible crimes.

Auberton, a wealthy and prominent settler, was the first victim. His re-mains were cut and slashed with a bowle knife in a revolting manner. The motive of the murderer seems to have been simply an insane lust for blood, as many valuables in the room were untouched. Auberton was an inoffensive man, the proprietor of a large coach

The second murder occurred in a public park. In quite a beautiful spot surrounded by flower beds and shade trees, where citizens are wont to nod and smoke through the heated hours of the day, the bodies of two Europeans were found, whose names could not be of the day, the bodies of two Europeans were found, whose names could not be ascertained. At high noon, while taking a siesta on a rustic bench before returning to their labors in the cool of the evening, they had been suddenly attacked from behind by the maniac murderer! After they were stunned their hands were chopped off and the remains horribly mutilated by a long murderous-looking axe, marked on the blade by a United States manufacturer. Numerous people were in the park, and the police were there in a remarkably short time. How the deed could be done in such an indescribably brief time without the fiend being detected or discovered in flight, is puzzling the entire police force.

Lovern's action is considered an ac-knowledgment of the guilt of the gang.

SAFE-CRACKERS CAUGHT.

Three Bad Men Who Will Go Bac

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.-William Loughbridge, a recent arrival from the East, is locked up in the city prison at the request of the police of-ficials of Kansas City, Mo. Dr. B. B. Lee of this city is also in custody as an accomplice after the fact, in the crime which it is supposed Loughbridge and other crooks committed.

On the night of February 7, of this year, the State Bank at Savanna, Mo., was entered. The safe was cracked, and fourteen bonds, worth $1000 each, be-longing to Mrs. Eliza Breckenridge, were storen. On March 11, Chief Crowley received a communication from the Chief of Police of Kansas City, calling tention to the crime, giving a description and numbers of the stolen bonds, and a request for the arrest of Loughbridge, Jake Weber, otherwise known as "Dutch Jake," and William O'Brien, a gentleman of many crimes and aliases, known in different vicini-ties upon which he had imposed his unwelcome personality, as "Red" O'Brien, John O'Brien and "Denver Red."

O'Brien, John O'Brien and "Denver Red."

Accompanying the order for the arrest of the worthy trio, was an offer of a reward of $1000 for the apprehension of the safe-crackers, and the recovery of the property. Loughbridge was soon located, and placed under police surveillance, but not arrested; the police hoping to capture the other two thieves. The Market-street Bank notified the police that the bonds had been offered for sale, and Dr. Lee, the holder, was induced to call again.

When arrested, Lee claimed that he was an innocent party, negotiating the sale of the bonds for a friend, who had acted for Loughbridge. The latter has been employed in a local real estate office, and says he came here from Texas. He will try to secure his ilberty by habeas corpus proceedings. None of the bonds were found in his rooms. The police believe that Weber and O'Brien are not here, but that after dividing the plunder they fied from Savanna in different directions.

He said that as yet he has not selected a location for the five sugar factories he contemplates erectivg. He thought Woodland, however, would be a good place for a factory. The new factories will not have a daily capacity of less than 2500 tons each. The Watsonville factory has a daily capacity of 1000 tons. He will offer every encouragement to farmers to raise beets, so as to ascertain the adaptability of the soil before deciding to locate a factory in their locality. Efforts of Rawson Parkhuest to Sa His Father's Property. BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIKE.

FRANCISCO, March 23.will be fled in Fresno tomorrow by Den-son & De Haven on behalf of Rawson H. S. Parkhurst, involving the owner-ship of five hundred lots in that city val-ued at $60,000, and the Marietta vineship of five hundred lots in that city valued at $50,000, and the Marietta vineyard of 160 acres at Fowler, worth at least $75,000. The Fresno property is owned by D. W. Parkhurst, the father of the plaintiff, and formerly one of the richest land-holders in the San Joaquin Valley. The Fowler vineyard was placed in trust by him for his three minor sons, but was alienated in an attempt to raise $30,000 to meet his subsequent indebtedness, and, although the mortgage only furnished $12,000 of this amount, the property has been foreclosed upon and ordered sold.

Being unable to furnish the necessary bonds for an appeal, D. W. Parkhurst was in imminent danger of losing the vineyard, and not only that, but the 500 Fresno lots as well. His eldest son, Rawson, has, however, become of age, and has intervened to protect his interests as well as those of his younger brothers and parents. They are all made parties to the action, but the real defendants are the Savings Bank of Southern California, the Fresno National Bank and its president, H. D. Colson.

Shirley at first consented and an agreement was made that the mill should be burned on the night of January 28. Shirley repented, however, and told Collins and Shepard that he would have nothing to do with the plan. On the night of January 28 Shirley was laid off and another watchman employed. That night the mill and its contents were burned. Collins and its contents were burned. Collins and Shepard have been held in $200 bail, which they will probably secure.

COLON A PREY TO FIRE.

THE COMMERCIAL PART OF THE CITY LARGELY DESTROYED.

Though Assisted in Suppressing the Outburst of Flame the Local De-partment Spends Five Hours with the Blaze.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.) NEW YORK, March 23.—The World's pecial cable dispatch from Colon itself out at 9 o'clock tonight. It de stroved the better half of the commer cial part of Colon, including a large number of tenement-houses, every important Chinese store, the hotels and government buildings, including the prison and school and markets and the Court of Justice. All of the Panama Railroad property was saved, only few cars being burned.

There was much looting of property during the excitement of the fire life was lost and hundreds are left homeless. The Panama fire brigade came across the isthmus to assist in roughly estimated at $500,000, the insurance covering about one-twentieth part. Business has been suspended.

Offer for Holmes's Autobiography Offer for Holmes's Autoblography. PHILADELPHIA, March 23.—Efforts are being made by several publishers to induce Murderer H. H. Holmes to write the story of his life, including a full confession of his crimes. A New York newspaper is the highest bidder, having offered Holmes $7500 for such a story. The condemned man has lately done a great deal of writing, the character of which he has concealed, and it is not known whether he has accepted any of the numerous offers.

MEN AND WOMEN

OF CULTURE.

Magnificent Masterpiece.

The attention of connoisseurs and critics in the world of art, and of all people of culture and refinement, is especially called to the fact that the lithographic reproduction of this celebrated painting was made under the special personal direction of the artist Moran-himself. Every one of the twenty-one component colors used in the printing was first approved by the artist before being put upon the lithographic stone.

> The Grandeur of the Gorge Portrayed.

The Grand Canyon of the Colorado, that wonderland of the world, pictured by an artist whose conception was striking, resistless, grand. Thomas Moran's painting, "THE GRAND CANYON OF THE COLORADO," was the artistic triumph and sensation of the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago. The faithfulness of the artist in picturing the awful grandeur of the gorge; the delightful delicacy with which he has touched the rolling clouds of mist; the masterly manner in which he has handled Nature's coloring; that melodrama of flame and gold, and rose and wine and azure, is altogether superb.

19th Century Genius.

It is only high genius that has made possible the reproduction of such a splendid work of art, without the loss of a single sun glint; with all the heights and depths of shade luminously portrayed—a reproduction so real that the master whose hand guided the brush-strokes on the original canvas says of it, in effect: "As perfect as perfect can be."

It is this great lithographic triumph, this magnificent reproduction of Moran's famous picture, 22 x x38 % inches in size, that THE TIMES has arranged to supply to subscribers. It is a picture with a theme grand enough and an execution beautiful enough to make it worthy a place on any wall-in any home.

A MIDNIGHT BLAZE.

The Indirect Cause Was a Cup of

A sociable cup of tea was the indirect cause of a $1500 fire last night, in which the home of C. E. Doty at No. 722 College street was half destroyed and its contents ruined by smoke and water.

Mr. Doty has recently been living in a six-room cottage at No. 722 College street, which he rented from Thomas McCaffery, chief assistant train dispatcher of the Southern Pacific. At present Mrs. Doty and her little daughter are in San Francisco. Mr. Doty has until recently been associated with Mr. Lindsey in the ownership of a planning-mill on Buena Vista, street. A short time ago Mr. Doty sold his share of the business to G. Perin. Messrs. Lindsey & Perin have been living with Mr. Doty.

Last evening the three men went downtown. Lindsey and Perin returned about 10:30 o'clock. They made a cup of tea on a gasoline stove, turned out the fire, and, after drinking the comforting beverage, went to bed.

It was just after they had sunk into a peaceful sleep that the two men were awakened by the noise of an explosion and a scream of "Fire!" They leaped out of bed and into a rew clothes, thinking all the time it was some other house. When they discovered the nearness of the danger, they dispatched G. Lawson, a young man who lives just across the street, to turn in the fire alarm. He had a long, hard run, for the nearest box is on the corner of Buena Vista and College streets. There was thus so much delay in turning in the alarm that the fire had gained much headway by the time the fire department arrived. But two powerful streams of water soon quenched the flames, leaving only a shell of a house, with a flooded interior.

Mrs. James Wilkinson, the woman who first saw the fire, lives at No. 726 College street, with only a small vacant lot between the two cottages. She says the flames burst in a sheet through the kitchen window of the Doty house. This testimony bears out the belief that the wicked gasoline stove was at the root of the whole trouble. The heat of the burning house was so intense that it broke the window of Mrs. Wi

The Family of Washington.

(Woodrow Wilson, in Harper's Magazine:) George Washington was cast for his career by a very scant and homely training. Augustine Washington, his father, lacked neither the will nor themeans to set him handsomely afoot, with as good a schooling, both in books and in affairs, as was to be had; he would have done all that a liberal and provident man should do to advuce his boy in the world had he lived to go with him through his youth. He owned land in four counties, more than five thousand acres all told, and lying upon both the rivers that refresh the fruitful Northern Neck, besides several plots of ground in the promising village of Fredericksburg, which lay opposite his lands upon the Rappahannock; and one-twelfth part of the stock of the Principlo Iron Company, whose mines and furnaces in Maryland and Virginis, yielded a better profit than any others in the two colonies He had commanded a ship in his time, as so many of his neighbors had in that maritime province, carrying iron from the mines to England, and no doubt bringing convict laborers back upon his voyage home again. He himself raised the ore from the mines that lay upon his own land, close to the Potomac, and had it carried the easy six miles to the river. Matters were very well managed there, Col. Byrd said, and no pains were spared to make the business profitable. Capt. Washington had represented his home parish of Truro, too, in the House of Burgesses, where his athletic figure, spared to make the business profitable. Capt. Washington had represented his home parish of Truro, too, in the House of Burgesses, where his athletic figure, his ruddy skin, and frank gray eyes must have made him as consplcuous as his constituents could have wished. He was a man of the world, every inch generous, hardy, independent. He lived long enough, too, to see how stalwart and capable and of how noble a spirit his young son was to be, with how manly a bearing he was to carry himself in the world; and had loved him many a beautiful and had loved him and made him his companion accordingly. But the end came for him before he could see the lad out of boyhood. He died April 12, 1743, when he was but Ingly. But the end came for him before he could see the lad out of boyhood. He died April 12, 1743, when he was but forty-nine years of age, and before George was 12; and in his will there was, of course, for George only a younger son's portion. The active gentleman had been twice married, and there were seven children to be provided for. Two sons of the first marriage survived. The bulk of the estate went, as Virginfan custom dictated, to Lawrence, the eldest son. To Augustine, the second son, fell most of the rich lands in Westmoreland. George, the eldest born of the second marriage, left to the guardianship of his young mother, shared with the four younger children the residue of the estate. He was to inherit his father's farm upon the Rappahannock, to possess, and to cultivate if he would, when he should come of age, but for the rest his fortunes were to make. He must get such serviceable training as he could for a life of independent endeavor. The two older brothers had been sent to England to get their schooling and preparation for life, as their father before them had been to get his—Lawrence to make ready to take his father's place when the time should come; Augustine, it was at first planned, to fit himself for the law. George could now look for nothing of the kind. He must continue, as he had begun, to get such elementary and practical instruction as was to be had of schoolmasters in Virginia and the young mother's care must stand him in the stead of a father's pilotage and oversight.

Fortunately Mary Washington was a wise and provident mother, a woman of too firm a character and to steadfast a courage to be dismayed by responsibility. She had seemed only a fair and beautiful girl when Augustine Washington married her, and there was a romantic story told of how that gallant Virginian sailor and gentleman had literally been thrown at her feet out of a carriage in the London streets by way of introduction—where she, too, was a visiting stranger out of Virginia. But she had shown a singular capacity for

FARMERS ASK BETTER PROTEC TION.

A Washington dispatch states that the farmers of the country are appeal ing to Congress just now in large numbers for an increased duty on hay Thousands of petitions have been in circulation in the country during the past few weeks, signed by hundreds of thousands of farmers, asking Congress to increase the rate of duty on hay and some other agricultural products. The reason of this is the enormous increase in the importations of hay, mostly from Canada, since the repeal of the McKinley law. The rate of duty on hay under the McKinley tariff was $4 per ton. In the year following the enactment of that aw, the importations of hay dropped from 125,000 tons to 29,000 tons. The Wilson law repealed the $4-a-ton rate established by the McKinley law, and in its place put a duty of 20 per cent. $1.60 per ton. So the present rate of duty on hav under the Wilson law is only about one-third what it was unde the McKinley law. The result of it is an enormous increase in the importations of hay. The amount of hay brought into the country since the enactment of the Wilson law has been more than double what it was in the corresponding length of time under the McKinley law.

The official figures for the first sever teen months of the Wilson law show a total importation of 373,860 tons of hay, against 140,082 tons in the last seventeen months of the McKinley law. This shows an increase of 233,778 tons. It will thus be seen that the importa-tions under the new law, by reason of the enormous reductions in tariff rates, have increased more than 150 per cent., and that nearly $2,000,000, which would otherwise have gone to the farmers of the United States, has gone out of the country by reason of the increased purchases of hay from abroad, brought in as a result of the reductions in rates

The following table shows the importations of hay by months in the last seventeen months of the McKinley law, compared with the first seventeer

The New York Tribune has this: "The Ohio Legislature confirms the pretensions of the American eagle as a songbird, settling the question by a statu tory ordinance if there has ever been any doubt about it. The avowed purpos of the law is to spread around this celebrated bird the protection which is given to other feathered songsters, and to prevent its destruction by sportsmen; but it may also be intended to embody a hint of its musical aptitude to such foreign nations as have not yet heard of it. The fact is, the fowl is of the highest vocal celebrity, often strik ing the highest notes in the scale when there is not the least occasion for it, and as a consequence singing rather musical status is confirmed by a legislative ordinance it ought to regulate its choral performances, and not con-fuse the general orchestration by squawking or screaming out of time or tune, as it has sometimes done hither-

"Tomorrow," said he, 'I will pay you £100,000 in hard cash." The Boer assented, and on the following day, when the deed of sale had been duly signed and witnessed, the pur-chaser produced two bags of sovereigns smaller of the two. 'Here,' said he, 'is £100.' 'Yes,' said the Boer. 'And here,' led the other, counting out the contents of the second bag, 'is £1000.'

THE BURBANK. The last week of the engagement of the Carleton company at the Burbank Theater opene last evening with a successful presentation of Sir Julius Benedict's roman tic opera, "The Lily of Killarney. Rena Atkinson, as Elly O'Connor, ha tic opera, "The Lily of Killarney." Rena Atkinson, as Elly O'Connor, has a part that suits here admirably. Her solo, "I'm Alone," was exquisitely sung, and in response to the hearty encore, she sang a verse of "The Last Rose of Summer" so sweetly, that a second verse was demanded. W. T. Carleton appears as Danny Mann, a loyal servitor, who, for his master's sake, would commit even murder. One of the best numbers in the opera is the duet, "I Come, My Heart's Delight," which he sings with J. C. Taylor. In the second act he has two good solos. William Hamilton appears as Father Tom, and is given several enjoyable solos, among them the monk's lament, "Tomorrow Will Be Friday," in which he strikes some amazinely 'ow notes, and in the third act, "Alas, How Easily Things Go Wrong." George W. Campbell did some good work as Myles na Coppaleen, and Tom Ricketts, though he rather overdid his part as Mr. Corrigar, sang a rollicking song in the second act, which created such a demand for more, that he had finally to bury his hero Riley, to be allowed to stop, Miss Emma Wells, who took the part of Shellah, danced a lively break-down that caught the fancy of the house, and had to be repeated. Miss Sara Carr appeared as Anna Chute, and Miss Clara Wisdom as Mrs. Cregan. The cave scene is remarkably pretty, and drew a round of applause when the curtain lifted on it.

They were off the key last night in six or eight different languages, and kept off it with a persistency worthy a better cause, when they tried to sing, but they can dance all right, and their jokes seemed to take in great fashion. The feature, however, which caught the house last night, was Al and Mamie Anderson, genuine colored folks, in their great dancing and singing bout, which so set the house rearing with applause that it came near stopping the show. The male member of this team is a great artist in his line, his dancing being fairly redolent of the atmosphere of "the old plantation," and asfull of darky movement as the frolic of a bevy of urching on a Mississippi levee. Together the cam made one of the biggest hits of the year.

The Athos family, in their great feats of tumbling, conclude the performance. They are all immensely cleven but they should not be permitted to let the junior member of the team appear, and if we had a society for the prevention

FIELD OF POLITICS. Gen. Grosvenor Discusses "The Field Against McKinley."

The Antagonism to the Ohio Man Unjustifiable. Platt, Quay, et al. Have No Grievance The Favorite-Son Scheme not a Success-Unqualified Denial of PECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES. WASHINGTON (D. C.,) March 18.— Gen. Grosvenor of Ohlo, who has had very much to do with the management of the McKinley campaign, so far as concerned, at my request made the fol-owing statement, which is of great in-erest to the students of the current po-tical campaign. He said:

by the statement so often made, 'the field against McKinley.' There is no reason justifying the position of the friends of other candidates, thus assumed, end it may as well be stated that Mr. Reed's managers are not fully and unalterably in what is known as the 'combine.' Mr. Reed's strength, however, has been taken from him by the combination of Morton Quay and Clarkson, and it is more than problematical whether his defeat, which 'now attack. seems assured, is not due in as large part to this fact as to any one contrib-

"There was no reason for Mr. Platt's hostility to Gov. McKinley at any time, and much less was there any reason why he should open a personal warfare upon McKinley without the slightest negotiation or conference with McKinley's friends. Gov. McKinley has never been hostile to New York Republicans, and has on all occasions answered their calls and gone to their assistance when requested. In the great conflicts in which Mr. Platt has been engaged, and which have so often wrecked the Republican party in New York, Gov. McKinley has been friendly to the side of Platt, recognizing him as a courageous Republican party in New York, Gov. McKinley has been friendly to the side of Platt, recognizing him as a courageous Republican and an untiring worker, but for some reason Mr. Platt reentered the field of politics two years ago last fall, and has: apparently bent all his energies from that time to this to the sole and only object of defeating McKinley. For President. He was astute enough to observe the rising tide of McKinley's popularity, and saw ahead of him that the public demands of the country would be for McKinley: and he set himself, with all his great power, to overly own a man whom, for some unaccount bole reason, he did not want to see President. He has selzed the legislative power of New York, and controls his own edicts, and there has not been one movement in New York and controls his own edicts, and there has not been one movement in New York was and constantly to the now developed purpose of Mr. Platt Nobody knows why. But to me, looking back and remembering as I do the earnest appeal made by McKinley to Garfield in my presence to appoint Mr. Platt secretary of the Treasury, the course of Mr. Platt is absolutely amazing.

"That which is called the combination of the bosses is popularly supposed to include Platt, Quay, Kellogg of Louisiana, Fessenden of Connecticut, and one or two other gentiemen, with Mr. Clarkson and Mr. Anderson and a few others as travelling agents; but it is not believed that Mr. Quay ha to drop in the race, all that is possible for Pennsylvania. He does not need to plan and skirmish to make himself a potent factor in American politics.

"The first purpose of the combine—and in this connection the word 'combine' in this interview relates to the New York controlling end of the conspiracy—has been to secure votes in the South, and to that end a vast amount of travel and time and labor, if not money, have been expended.

State excepting Iowa has yet voted for either of the other candidates. In Louislana, the delegates at large are confessedly mixed: two, perhaps for Reed, one for Allison and one for McKinley. The other votes, which have been secured by the 'field,' are scattering votes in the various States. Iowa has given her vote to her favorite son, Allison, who is a real candidate for the Presidency, and who is being enthusiastically supported by his home delegation. Next to 'McKinley, Allison has'the greatest number of votes. During the coming ten days conventions will be held in Wisconsin, New York, Texas, Minnesota and South Dakota, and then there will be a skip over until April.

"It is being urged that McKinley's votes are coming from the South, and not from States that will give electoral votes. Let us see how much there is in this statement. There is no man foolish enough to dispute the following proposition: That Illinois will give McKinley, either upon the first or second ballot, 40 of her 48 votes; that Indiana will give her entire 30 votes; that Kentucky will give her entire 26 votes not later than the second ballot; that Michigan will give her entire 26 votes on the first ballot; that Minnesota will at least divide her vote in favor of McKinley on the second ballot, giving him 9 votes, and that Missouri's 34 votes will be solid for McKinley in the first ballot, Nebraska will not delay longer than the second ballot to give McKinley io. Nebraska will probably be divided, giving McKinley 10 votes, with North Carolna a sure 16 and Oregon an unquestioned 8. Tennessee will give McKinley 20 votes on the first ballot, Virginia not less than 18, West Virginia 12. Wisconsin 24 and New Mexico and Arizona each 6. These are certainties. This makes a total of 303 that no man can successfully criticise.

"Yow, in addition to all these, we have California Colorado. Delaware.

The above can be considered an authoritative and conservative statement of the present situation.

A PRACTICAL FAILURE.

Favorite Son Movement not Sat

The Favorite Son Movement not Satisfactory to Its Promoters.

The politicans are beginning to recognize the fact that the people are resenting the "favorite-son" scheme which was put up by the political bosses for the purpose of defeating Gov. McKinley for the nomination of President. The Washington Post, edited by that sterling Ohio Democrat, Hon. Beriah Wilkins, commenting upon this subject, says:

"Some of the leading Republicans, who have been watching the growth of the McKinley movement with undisguised alarm, have now become convinced that the fight against the Ohio man has been conducted on wrong lines. It is pretty late in the day to discover the error, and this fact, too, is frankly admitted. The anti-McKinley men have now come to the conclusion that the "favorite-son" idea is a source of weakness rather than of strength to the anti-McKinley forces. One of the most prominent workers in the Republican party, a well-known. Senator from one of the border States, said yesterday that he did not blame the average politician from joining the McKinley ranks. According to his views, a glance over the field was not such as to encourage any one in the belief that McKinley would not win the nomination. There was Reed, with strength in New England and in Louisiana, but all the other candidates seemed to be men of straw, simply put up to beat McKinley. The cold, calculating politician, who wants to be on the winning side and get a share of the offices, as the reward, for early and effective support, saw that Morton had but a perfunctory following in New York, and was not likely to be the nominee; that Quay occupied almost a similar position in Pennsylvania; that Cullom was not apt to get even the solid delegation from Illinois, and that Davis in Minnesota and Manderson in Nebraska, were not worth courting even as remote possibilities. Allison, another favorite son, was a probability, but only as a compromise in the case of a dead-lock. The average politician, this Senator went on to say, who is not bound by Iocal Me another favorite son, was a probability, but only as a compromise in the case of a dead-lock. The average politician, this Senator went on to say, who is not bound by local ties, is not dealing with men who have little or no show of winning. If New York and Pennsylvania were to declare for Reed, for instance, the McKinley movement would receive such a check, but as long as the anti-McKinley strength is dissipated among a number of candidates, who have only local strength and are making no headway whatever, it can do nothing to stop the progress which McKinley is now making toward the nomination."

UNQUALIFIEDLY FALSE.

The Statement that Money Has Bee

M. A. Hannal has finally consented o notice the charges to the effect that money had been used corruptly in the canvass of Maj. McKinley for the Pres dential nomination. After reading the ecent interview of Senator Chandles in the Washington Post, Mr. Hanns in the Washington Post, Mr. Hanna said:

"The statement made by Senator Chandler to the effect that Mr. Mc-Kinley's canvass had been one of boodle from start to finish, and that I had levied contributions on the industrial interests of the East, is absolutely and unqualifiedly false. I would not have dignified his interview to the extent of even taking notice of it, did he not challenge a denial. In doing so, I content myself with the simple statement of the fact that neither Mr. McKinley's character nor my own calls for any further reply in this connection. As to the invasion of Senator Quay's State, or any other, I have not found it necessary or expedient to resort to any such course in order to create McKinley sentiment. In every State of the Union it has come spontaneously from the people, and his canvass is entirely in their hands. As to my motives in contributing either time or money in the interests of Mr. Mc vass is entirely in their hands. As to my motives in contributing either time or money in the interests of Mr. McKinley, I hold that Senator Chandler is in no position to judge. My devotion to the Republican party and its principles has not been inspired by this campaign. The insinuation that it was founded on a desire to hold office or control patronage, is absolutely without foundation. I can fully appreciate why the honorable Senator cannot understand that sort of thing in politics. Having said this much, I leave my case in the hands of the Republican party of the United States."

Free Traders "Agin" the Favorite.

(Phoenix, Ariz., Republican:) If McKinley goes down at St. Louis it will be by the use of free-trade money against him. Every free trader in the United States is hoping for his defeat in the convention—is ready to furnish money to defeat him, and it will be found in the end that Democratic free traders are as anxious that Mr. McKinley should be vanquished as his immediate antagonists in his party. Protection under McKinley will be no theoretic, discursive proposition, but will become a reality that will take such deep root that the schemes of free trade cannot prevail against it for a generation to come. The Republican party as represented by its great majority, is the representative of protective tariff system, as has been said by Mr. Clarkson; but Mr. Clarkson very well knows the power of the man at the national helm in this matter, and the result of his convictions upon its usefulness to the people and the nation. No one questions but that reciprocity, protection and all their contingent advantages to the people of this country, will take the most advanced ground under Mr. McKinley's direction as President of the United States, should he become such. It is not questioned that a Republican might be elected President of the nation that would paralyze the growth of our commerce, our industries, the prosperity of our working men and trades people, and such a Republican will be sent to the White House if British money, Democratic influence and the very small element called free-trade Republicans can prevail at the St. Louis convention. The great contest between the advance and growth of protection and reciprocity and the powers that flow from them to the people will be fought at St. Louis. Should McKinley go down in the fight, foreign gold and the Democracy will have won an important point in the contest against protection and reciprocity. Free Traders "Agin" the Favorite.

interests of the world at large, lose none of their keen interest in the trend of political events. They are overwhelmingly Republican in political faith, and will loyally support the nominee of the St. Louis convention. But individually they have their preferences as to that nominee, and hundreds of their preferences single out Comrade McKinley. He is looked upon by hundreds of the veterans here as the man of the hour, and his nomination will crown an old-dashioned enthusiasm at this place, which will help to swell California's handsome majority for the Ohio statesman.

I KNOW IT'S KINDER RAINY, BUT-

It kinder seems to me I heered a feller say last fall. Thet he wuz gittin' awful 'feered we'd have no rain at all; He said he seen las' winter when the clouds went drivin' by, Our rains wuz kinder at an en' an' we w'uld ketch it dry.

An' so it wuz frum fall to spring, the clouds wuz in a rush,
Jest stopped to give us dribbling enough to mek our mush!

We had to grub our crop of hay, too short to try to mow;
Looked like the drought had come to stay an'; wouldn't never go.

So when November went las' year and nothin' yet but win',

The feller said. "You see it's clear it's comin' dry agin.

An' by this time nex' year ye'll see the people all in need;
The crops ain't even goin' to be enuff to mek 'em seed.

Why, lan' won't be no sort o' price, can't give it to the poor!

Now, ef you'll take a fool's advice you'd better sell it, sure, An' put your money in a vault agin that dreadful day;

Now, ef you don't, 'twill be your fault, not heedin' what I say."

It somehow kinder seems to me that felier's slipped a cog,
Fer rain's been comin' pretty free, an' ev'ry road's a bog.
A cloud no bigger'n my han'il let an awful mess
Of water leak out on the lan', too much fer some I ruess:

But as fer me, why let her come, I feel like I could dance
An' caper 'round until, by Gum! I split my Sunday pants!
I know the roads is gittin' soft an' rivers gittin' high.
That folks Is lookin' up aloft and wishin' it wuz dry.
But when the lan' wuz dry as dust an' not a drop of wet.
I hered 'em pray, "Good Lord, we trust You'll give us rain," you bet!
They ain't no use a-tryin' fer to please the human race.
They've allers been a-cryin' that they's somethin' out o' place.
An' so they keep a-cussin' an' a-gnashin' o' their gums,
But with all their fret an' fussin' they mus' take it as it comes.
I'll tell you what's the matter now, as fur as I'm concerned,
I say to let her patter and the grumbl'r be durned;
The rains is soakin' up our lan's, so let 'em soak, I say;
The hills is spittin' on their han's on ev'ry rainy day.
At night I lay an' hear the drops a-spatterin' like sin,
Until I feel my lanky chops go splitnin' in a grin.
An', chucklin', I go to sleep an' dream o' pleasant things.
Lord, let her soak the mountain steep to feed the summer springs!
Fer in the drivin' rain I see the joy uv summertime.

rate war between rival bakers in mona is reducing the price of bread so low that citizens are tempted to lay up a year's supply.

Happily that Escondido family polsoned by eating canned berries escaped a fatal termination of the illness. The frequency of such accidents is a strong argument in favor of putting up all fruits in glass instead of tin. The dif-ference in cost is largely offset by the ssible use of glass receptacles for ore than one season.

A man with a pointed head, long nose, loose mouth and shifty eyes set close together, is a pretty safe indi-vidual to avoid. The poor woman who was foolish enough to marry a biped answering this description, is now mourning the loss both of her sorry apology for a husband, and of a large slice of her savings to boot.

After Joaquin Miller's lecture in San Diego recently, on what is not found in books, a bright woman approached the poet, with others, to shake his hand.

Joaquin gazed at the brilliant blonde hair of the lady, remarking: "Ah, your hair has been combed by the sunshine of California." "Oh, no," replied the quick-witted woman; "It was dyed in the Mississippi Valley."

California is distinguished among the States for the thoroughness of its com-mon-school instruction. In no State has the holding of teachers' institutes been so productive of good results or so com-mon. Just now both Riverside and San Bernardino are holding them, and the thought is suggested that the excel-lence of the schools is directly due to the excellence of the teachers. The interchange of ideas at these frequent gatherings may be responsible for more good than can be readily computed.

Complaint is often made on this side of the national boundary that known criminals are allowed to slip through the meshes of the law. In Lower Cal ifornia the trouble is of a different sort. There persons accused of criminality are kept in prison for months in the hope that evidence of their mis-deeds may be secured. They may be innocent, but the authorities dislike to think so. Hence the kick that is be-

It is encouraging to note the steady increase in the market price of crude oil and the favorable effect this is having on development. Such ruinous competition as characterized the first year's experience in the local field should never be permitted again. Inheld in restraint obedient to the de-mands of trade. By strict attention to the requirements of the market Los Angeles may produce oil enough to provide cheap fuel for years to the manufacturing concerns everywhere springing up in California. Fairness to the producer and to the consumer should be the keynote to the quotations

San Diego is to enjoy the benefits of electric railway competition. The old cable line leading to the pavilion on the bluffs overlooking Mission Valley is to be electrized and one of the most charming sections of mesa land in Cal-ifornia made desirable for residence The plans of the company contemplate the readornment of the pavilion grounds and the considerable extension grounds and the considerable extension of the park. From this elevated table-land a view of unrivalled beauty may be obtained, including bay and ceean, valley and the range of mountains extending far into Lower California. With such beautiful suburbs San Diego should be the home of those who delight in the beauties of nature and whose cultured society would attract residents by thousands.

THE PUEBLO INDIANS.

tive Sons of the Golden West to Be Here in Force—Decorative Features of the Celebration, Notable Singers to Be Present.

Much appreciation is expressed on account of the favorable conclusion of negotiations with the Pueblo Indians of Ysleta, N. M., who will send a delegation to La Fiesta. It is probable that some of those who were here last year will be in the company, but a larger number will be induced to make the journey next month. The reports of the open-handed hospitality extended to them before have awakened interest throughout the tribe, and it is learned from Charles F. Lummis, their friend and patron that not less than 50 men, women and children will visit Los Angeles during flests week. Some formalities are yet necessary, but the main issue has already been assented to by the governor and cacique, who wield, jointly with the native junta, or congress, the authority of the tribe. The present governor is Juan Dolores Jojola, and it is by him that the company will be selected to represent the tribe at La Fiesta. From Mr. Lummis, who lived among the Pueblos for some time, interesting information is obtained regarding the governmental system of the tribe. "The junta," says Mr. Lummis, "is composed of about 200 men, all over 40 years of age and distinguished for their upright character and wisdom in council. Any man who has reached the required age is eligible for admission to the junta. Those desirous of membership, against whom no objection exists, are nominated by the cacique, who is the tribal penitant, or high priest, and the nomination is usually confirmed by the junta. Members hold office continually, or so long as they maintain the deserving character, on account of which they secured their appointment. There are no ring politics at Ysleta. Honorable performance of tribal duties and the preservation of good character insure the seats of junta members, who have no fears of loss of office through the temporary success of rival factions. It is a pure democracy, though indian.

In connection with La Flesta celebration, the Native. Sons of the Golden West of this city have succeeded in obtaining the consent of the delegates to the Grand Parlor, which is to meet at San Luis Obispo on April 27, to visit the celebration here before convening the Grand Parlor. The local parlors have appointed to take charge of the entire affair a general committee consisting deeds may be secured. They may be innocent, but the authorities dislike to think so. Hence the kick that is being registered by the friends of Pratt and Garrett, who have been in the carcel for a year and see no hope of escape, though not a scintilla of evidence can be found against them.

National City raises, among other wonderful things, hens of peculiar habits. They like to do things that other hens do not do. The lowly plebeian nest is disdained by them. Like Joaquin Miller, they enjoy living on a plane above the ordinary crowd. Earth seems to be too earthy for these feathered bipeds. Therefore, when they want to lay an egg, they fly to the branches of a cypress tree, and on a perch some twenty feet from the ground, let the egg drop. The rancher who owns these erratic fowls, proposes to attach a ball and chain to these high-minded creatures in order to keep them near the ground and save their eggs from destruction.

The prize banners for use in the floral parade are made of red, green and yellow satin, fringed heavily with gilt tassels and lettered in shaded gold. They are mounted on bamboo staffs, and fastened with satin streamers and gilt rings. The street draperles are also finished, and nearly ready for placing. Much attention is being given to the float costumes. Each float will have four horses and to each float fourteen men are assigned. Much care is required to prevent too great similarity in costuming.

Among the notable soloists who have been engaged are Mrs. Maude Berry Fisher, soprano, and Mrs. Charles Dickman, contralto, both of San Francisco. There was a flesta chorus rehearsal at Y.M.C.A. The military features will be elaborate and are being arranged with much care by Gen. Last.

Building at San Diego

Clarence L. Barber, Esq., of, San Diego, was in the city yesterday on business connected with the United States District Court. "Much building is still going on at San Diego," said he. "A new block is about to be erected on the corner of Fifth and C streets, adjoining the Hotel Brewster, and the new block lately erected by U. S. Grant, Jr. This, with the other handsome structures recently added to Fifth street, will further centralize business on that street, the commercial center tending constantly northward and being how at Fifth and D streets. The city is fairly prosperous, but we are hoping for better things."

Chamber of Commerce Exhibits.

Another installment of San Diego's famous lemons was added to the exhibit of that city at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday. More beautiful specimens of the citrus family than the Bonnie Braes are not grown in California, their glossy appearance and abundance of juice making them quick sellers in the local market. They are not good shippers, unfortunately, the Lisbon, Villa Franca and Eureka having much better keeping qualities. All these well-known varieties are grown to perfection in the bay region.

BRANCH POSTOFFICES.

No Increase in Carrier Service 1 They Are Established. Postmaster Mathews has no official advice regarding the intentions of the department, but from the press dis-patches he infers that it is intended to relieve the local congestion by the establishment of branch postoffice stations, rather than by an increase in the tions, rather than by an increase in the number of mall-carriers. In asking for better facilities, these alternatives were suggested, and it appears that flye branch offices are to be opened in response to the request.

As in other instances, the location of the offices having been determined approximately, those desirous of appointment as assistant postmasters will be permitted to bid for the positions, preference being given to those whose location and business seem best suited to the conduct of the offices. The matter will doubtless be adjusted within a few days, for it is thought that orders are on the way from Washington for the establishment of the branch stations.

He Doesn't Like Cows.

He Doesn't Like Cows.

Lowing herds are all very well in their place, but T. J. Saunders thinks that when driven through a city street, affrighting horses, rushing into yards, and breaking down shrubery and young trees, and trampling on children, they are a public nuisance. In East Los Angeles are a number of railroad cattle-pens, and almost every day one can see herds driven through the streets from place to place. The Bast Side people have remonstrated in vain, so yesterday Mr. Saunders took the matter in hand, and swore to a complaint toharging John Doe with driving cattle along Workman street, without a permit from the Chief of Police.

Another Source of Supply. ferring to the petition of persons on Beaudry avenue and Angelina street, south of Temple, in which they asked for relief from unwholesome water, says that injustice was done to that section of the city by the report. The condition, while true of the neighborhood named, does not exist at Angelifo Heights, where the water used for domestic purposes comes from a different source of supply—the reservoir above the Sisters' Hospital. To attain that height the water has to be pumped twice. The reservoir is covered and the water clean and pure.

Lacerated His Hand.

Raiph Henderson was bitten in the hand by a savage mastiff at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon at a saloon at No. 722 North Main street. The wound was painful, as the flesh was much torn and lacerated, but is not dangerous. Henderson went to the Police Station and had the wound dressed by Police Surgeon Bryant: The dog had bitten a number of people previously, so it was killed, as too savage an animal to be allowed to live.

Where is Philip Mason?

A letter has been received at polici headquarters from Mrs. John Drape of No. 40 Chestnut street, Haverhill Mass, asking for information as to the whereabouts of her nephew, Philip C. Mason. Mason is a seventeen-year-old boy. He was last heard of in Los Angeles, where his father and mother died.

ORIENTAL ART.

There is a wonderful collection of Japanese works of art now on free exhibition at No. 250 South Broadway, in this city. Measrs. G. T. Marsh' & Co. of San Francisco, the famous experts in and importers of this class of goods, have placed this beautiful and unique collection in the hands of C. A. Sumner & Co., for sale at public auction. An inspection will amply repay the visitor. It would be impossible to enumerate the numberless articles on view, though special mention may be made of a magnificent bronze ornament standing about eight feet high and valued at $1500. Many of the articles are rare antiques, which can never be duplicated. The sale will commence at 2 p.m., on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, and be continued at 7:30 p.m., of the same days, the goods being sold in the order given in the catalogue, copies of which can be obtained at the above address.

THE FORTUNE HUNTERS.

Three fortune hunters once agreed
To make a test of pluck,
To tempt the Fates and intercede
Each for a share of luck,
Each was to go in different ways
Alone for wealth and fame,
And try to win the public praise—
A fortune and a name.

One as a soldler sold his sword To nations that would buy, Yet he amassed but scanty hoard As time did onward fly. Another tried the gold mines where Such piles of wealth were found, But 'twas a very trifling share That his long labors crowned.

The third would not a distance roam
In search of golden ore,
But very wisely staid at home
And started keeping store.
He showed good sense and enterprise
And soon had wealth and fame,
His hobby was to advertise
And thus his fortune came.

Fighting Weather.

Yesterday was an unusually fruitful day in the line of arrests for disturbance of the peace. The liveliest row was that between Sam Christopher, the barber, and E. R. Holman, the laborite over the Sunday-closing question. At 8:15 o'clock Officer Huston and one of the private watchmen supplied by the Insley Detective Agency, arrested J. F. Cronan and J. D. Hardwell on Third street, for attacking Horace Smith. A little later Deputy Constable James entered the Police Station with a prisoner in tow. It was August Ronan, arrested on a warrant for disturbing the peace. Ronan had $265 on bis person, but he blustered and talked loud and refused to put up $25 ball, so he was at once locked up. One more offender was found in an eating house. He refused to accede to the proprietor's invitation to pay his bill, and resisted vigorously when Officer Stephenson took a hand in the matter. He refused to give his name, so he was booked at the Police Station as "Fool." Mr. "Fool" gave $25 ball.

A petition is being circulated for the signatures of property-owners and business men on First street praying the City Council to take action on a nuisance maintained by the Los Angeles Transfer Company in keeping truck and bus teams standing nearly all the while upon that thoroughfare between Broadway and Spring street. The petitioners set forth that from five to seven teams of the transfer company are kept for hours at a time on the street, the horses being fed by the use of nosebags. The business men of the street have before protested against turning the street into a feedyard, and are now making a determined effort to secure a chance for themselves and patrons to reach their own front doors. OBITUARY.

Mrs. Caroline Livingston Rogers.
ROGERS—Mrs. Caroline Livingston Rogers, beloved wife of Ivins D. Rogers, died at her home, 801 Union ave., March 8, 1896.
If she had lived until the 27th, she would have been 52 years of age. Mrs. Rogers was a woman beloved by all, and of rare business and social qualities. Always cheerful and amusing, few knew that she was such a suifferer as she had been for years. In her last illness, when she had to go to bed, she kept husband, family and nurse in constant good spirits by her humor and hopefulness. When the sad hour came that she knew her malady might prove fatal, she told them she was ready to go. Her chief desire was that husband and friends should "meet her there" in that brighter world above.

Such hosts of friends one person seldom had, and many a poor wanderer blesses her for her kindness and benefits. Her married life was an earnest desire to make home bright for the husband, who was lover and comrade always—companions in the best sense—seldom separated, even for a day. Mrs. Rogers also leaves a daughter, by a former marriage, Mrs. Clara Hostetter of Conjondia, Kan.; an aged father, Nathan Livingston, of Cleveland, O., and two sisters, Mrs. Southam of Geneva, O., and two sisters, Mrs. Southam of Geneva, O., and Mrs. A. D. Grovè-of Republic, Mo.; a brother-in-law and sister-in-law here, who loved her as their own. Mrs. Caroline Livingston Rogers

The City Attorney was nsulted on the proposition and said by the company, whereupon orders were given the Street Superintendent to given the Street Superintendent to strictly enforce the law in the case.

This same company, which has for its head E. E. Peck, yesterday applied to the Council for an electrical franchise, in the following petition:

"To the Mayor and Council of the City of Los Angeles: I hereby respectfully petition and ask that you advertise for sale, and sell according to law and ordinance, a franchise which shall include the right to erect and maintain poles upon, and run wires over and along the public streets, alleys and places within the city of Los Angeles, and also to construct and maintain therein underground conduits. That said rights shall all be for the purpose of carrying, furnishing and distributing elecetricity and electric energy for the purpose of furnishing power, heat and light, and to that end I append hereto a suggested form for franchise, for which I should like to bid."

Accompanying Mr. Peck's draft of franchise was a numerously-signed petition from citizens living south of Seventh street and west of the Los Angeles River, reading as follows:

"We the undersigned residents of that part of Los Angeles which is south of Seventh street and west of the Los Angeles River, reading as follows:

"We the undersigned residents of that part of Los Angeles which is south of Seventh atreet and west of the river, respectfully represent that we have long wanted incandescent electric lighting in the territory occupied by us, and have been unable to procure the same; that E. E. Peck has now an electric lighting plant west of the city, just outside the limits, and is furnishing are and incandescent lighting at the University, Harper tract, Rosedale, etc. We are informed that he is to make application to the city for a franchise for furnishing electric light within the city, and we urgently ask that his request be granted and a franchise granted to him."

The entire matter was referred by the Council to the Board of Public Works.

HELP FOR A POLICE CLERK.

It was noted in the recent report of the grand jury that the amount of business transacted in Justice Morrison's Police Court is of such a volume that with the help now employed it cannot be properly handled. Yesterday Justice Morrison and Clerk W. W. Everett presented the following petition to the Council in relation to the matter:

"To the honorable City Council: I would respectfully call your attention to the necessity for additional clerical help in Department. Two of the Police Court of this city, presided over by Justice D. C. Morrison. The volume of business is so great in this court as to render it impossible for any one person to perform all the clerical work of the court, even by devoting several extra hours to the task daily. This condition of affairs is mainly due to the extraordinary amount of civil business which comes into this department of the City Justices' courts. Since the 1st of January there have been filed in it 267 civil cases. Every alternate week the current police business in transacted in Department. Two, which takes upnearly if not the entire afternoon sessions during that week. When the court is in session as a police court your petitioner's time is fully devoted to making out receipts for bail deposits, filing papers, attending to the police cash account, and issuing subpoenas, ball bonds, commitments, etc., so that writing up the docket of police cases invariably has to be postponed until the following day, unless the work is done after business hours. Besides the work spoken of in connection with police court cases, much of your petitioner's time during court hours is taken up waiting upon attorneys and litigants in civil cases.

"There being such a volume of civil business in the court, it follows also that many appeals are taken, which necessitate the making of transcripts of dockets, followed by trips to the Courthouse to deliver such papers to the County Clerk. In cases of e

AFTERNOON SESSION.

An Electric Railway Said to Be Breaking the Law.

The question as to whether the Los Angeles and Pacific Railway Company can be compelled to stop its cars for passengers this side of Daly street, com-

Angeles and Pacific Railway Company can be compelled to stop its cars for passengers this side of Daly street, coming into the city, was reported upon by the City Attorney to the Council yesterday, in the following legal opinion:

"You have instructed me to furnish you with an opinion as to whether or not the Los Angeles and Pasadena Electric Railway Company can be compelled to stop for passengers coming into the city while using the lines of the Los Angeles Railway Company.

"As I understand the matter, the cars of the Los Angeles Railway Company.

"As I understand the matter, the cars of the Los Angeles and Pasadena Electric Railway Company—refuse to stop for passengers who may wish to get off or on their cars at points between Daly street and the center of the city. Your question, therefore, involves the further question as to the right of the Los Angeles Railway Company between Daly street and the corner of Fourth and Spring streets. The Los Angeles Railway Company between Daly street and the corner of Fourth and Spring and Fourth streets and the intersection of Pasadena avenue and Daly street under franchises granted originally to B. O. Carr and the Los Angeles Consolidated Electric Railway Company, The Los Angeles and Pasadena Electric Railway Company operates its cars from the intersection of Pasadena avenue and Daly street to the northern city limits under a franchise originally granted to W. D. Larrabee. The Los Angeles and Pasadena avenue and Daly streets under a franchise originally granted to W. D. Larrabee. The Los Angeles Railway Company to Fourth and Spring streets under a lease or other contract existing between these two companies.

"Tam of the opinion that the Los Angeles and Pasadena avenue and Daly street over the tracks of the Los Angeles Railway Company to Fourth and Spring streets under a lease or other contract existing between these two companies.

"Tam of the opinion that the Los Angeles and Pasadena a leatric Railway Company, for two reasons: First, because neither the franchises unde way franchise is that the company will carry passengess between any and all points on its line upon the payment of the proper fare. The Los Angeles Railway Company has no right to impose the additional burden of another railway in and over the public streets without the consent of the Council, when the people living and owning property on such streets receive no benefit therefrom, and cannot even ride upon the cars of such company. If, indeed, it can afford and furnish terminal facilities for the railroad run between this city and Pasadena, it may also afford and furnish such facilities for a transcontinental railroad, or any number or kinds of railroad, so long as electricity is the motive power.

"The Los Angeles Railway Company has no such right or powers, and I am of the opinion that the Pasadena line cannot run over its tracks without a franchise from this city so to do, and cannot even then do so for a greater distance than five blocks consecutively.

"It follows, therefore, that you can lissist upon these cars stopping for passengers at any and all points on the line.

insist upon these cars stopping for passengers at any and all points on the line.

"I am informed that the Los Angeles and Pasadena line is now building out Macy street, and intends within a short time to be running over its own tracks exclusively. It would necessarily cause this company much loss and damage to prohibit it from operating its cars in the meanwhile over the tracks of the other road, and this point I leave to you to determine, having given you what I believe is the law of the subject." This opinion was received, and the Los Angeles and Pasadena Railway Company instructed to comply with this report.

Other matters referred to the City Attorney were reported and acted upon as follows:

"As directed by you, I have prepared and herewith present an ordinance allowing the City Assessor one additional deputy to July 8." Adopted.

"In the matter of the demand of Lucy J. Harvey for $2844, for damages on account of the grading of Olive street, I am of the opinion that the only way this matter can be determined will be by an action in court, and I, therefore, recommend that the demand be denied." Adopted.

"In regard to the City Treasurer's inquiry as to what disposition should be made of the first set, of street improvement bonds which were prematurely issued for the improvement of Twelfth street, I recommend that he mark such bonds 'cancelled,' and the reason for their cancellation on the face of each bond, and file the same among the records." Adopted.

"In the matter of the petition of the National Ice Company asking permission to use water from the Los Angeles River for the purpose of cooling their pipes on the condition that they will return the same to the river in the same quantity as taken, I am of the opinion that tyou may enter into a lease with this company for not exceeding two years, and with the proviso venire had to be issued, after the juries of Departments One, Three and Six had been exhausted in the effort to obtain a panel, which would suit both sides. The taking of evidence did not begin until 4 p.m., and only two witnesses were examined, George Brown and A. W. Cochrane.

The story of the shooting is briefly this: On December 11 the two men, Harmon and Carroll, were working together as masons on Maler & Zobelein's brewery. They had both been drinking a good deal of beer, and had accumulated a good deal of a jag, when they lated a good deal of a jag, when they struck work at night. The two men

Mr. Smith gave a detailed account of the expense and trouble to which he had been put during his receivership, in hiring a book-keeper, collector and interpreter, and in disposing of 200 fons of hay in addition to taking charge of the property on "Nigger Alley" and Alameda street. The receipts were $118.25, and the disbursements, $35.83, leaving a balance on hand of $82.42. The receiver left the matter of his compensation in the hands of the court, after stating the great value of the property, and the heavy bond he had been obliged to give. Judge Shaw seemed to take the view that Mr. Smith had done much more than was required of him by the court, and that, while the plaintiffs might pay him what they chose, the defendant should not be taxed with any unnecessary expense. THE SUPREME COURT.

PERCOLATING WATERS.

Judgment Affirmed in the Case of

The Supreme Court has affirmed the judgment of the lower court in the case of Gould vs. Eaten, a suit brought to prevent the diversion by means of a tunnel of the waterspercolating through the sandstone strata of a cañon in th Santa Inez mountains, near the Cold Spring branch of Montecito Creek. uld, the plaintiff, is the owner of a tract of land through which the stream flows. In October, 1892, the owner of a tract of land lying above Gould's, on the stream, granted to the defendants, Eaton et al., the right to enter thereon and excavate a tunnel for developing water, which tunnel was constructed at a depth of about fifty feet below the level of the stream. The porous and fissured formation of the sandstone in the cafion permits the water from the stream and in the ground overlying the tunnel to drain into it.

The present action was brought by Gould to restrain the defendants from diverting the waters of the stream by flows. In October, 1892, the owner of a

The present action was brought by Gould to restrain the defendants from diverting the waters of the stream by means of the tunnel, and from preventing the water which would issue from the mouth of the tunnel from flowing back into the channel of the stream. The court found that at the time of the trial of the action there was a flow of water from the tunnel, at its mount, of 3.25 inches, measured under a 4-inch pressure, and that, of this amount, 1.43 inches was diverted by the tunnel from the natural course of the water flowing in the stream, while the rest was gathered from the subterranean waters percolating in the sandstone of the adjacent mountains. Judgment was thereupon rendered, giving to the plaintiff the relief asked by him, to the extent of 1.43 inches, the defendant being permitted to divert and appropriate the rest of the water in the tunnel.

The court holds that the rule is well established that the principles of law which govern the right to surface waters apply equally to the subterrunean waters percoint of the soil itself, and belongs to the owner of the land. This rule is not changed by the character of the manual respection of the capital for an excursion around the Kitchengerases the strata of sandstone stops the percolation of the evater, which separates the strata of sandstone stops the percolation of the water, which appears a fact which was not made by the trial court. The judgment is affirmed.

Christopher grew angry. He freely expressed his opinion on the Sunday closing petition and everyone connected with it, from E. R. Holman down to the with it, from E. R. Holman down to the man who manufactured the ink it was written with. Holman kept on until the barber ordered him to leave his shop. Holman retorted that a barbershop was a public place and he meant to stay as long as he wished. The idea that he was not lord over his own barber-shop, made Christopher exceedingly shgry. He threatened to throw Holman out unless he should leave at once. Holman refused to go until the barber should cease threatening and retire to the back of his store. Them Christopher rushed down upon him in his wrath, pushed him backwards, kicking, struggling, fighting, toward the door.

Just then Officer Matuskiewiz rushed in, separated the combatants and onnounced that they were both under arrest. Holman at once subsided, but the excited barber raged and stormed. He hurled his cigar in the face of the polloceman and loudly proclaimed that a man's barbershop was his castle, that he had a perfect right to put a loafer out, and that the polloceman had no right to arrest him. Both men were assisted into the patrol wagon and the two offenders were hurried to the Police Station.

The two peace disturbers appeared before Justice Morrison, who set the case for 2 o'clock this afternoon. Meanwhile both men are out on ball, E. L. Christopher the caterier going bond for his brother, the barber, in the sum of $25.

MAIN-STREET IMPROVEMENT. The Property-holders Had Another

The attendance was not as large as at the previous meeting Members of the committee appointed to secure legal opinions on the subject to secure legal opinions on the subject of an injunction, reported that they had seen a firm of attorneys, who gave a partial opinion on the subject, from a somewhat hurried review of the papers in the case. The attorneys assured the property holders that they had a perfect right to bring an injunction suit for themselves, to restrain the contractor from carrying out his bid.

Arrangements have been perfected for an excursion around the Kiteshaped track on Saturday, the 28th, inst., the proceeds to be devoted to swelling the fund of the Newsboys' Home. The Southern California Railway officials have generously entered into the spirit of the scheme and through their friendly offices special concessions have been obtained for those participating in the excursion. Lunch will be served at Riverside at half the usual rates, the proprietors of the hotels there having agreed to contribute a portion of their receipts to the fund. At one house the price will be 25 cents, at another 50 cents, or half the usual fare, and a like arrangement has been perfected for those who may desire to drive along famous Magnolia avenue at Riverside and through the orange groves of the pioneer coloniats.

FIGURING ON THE ENERGY OF A

Power - Advances in Electric Heating-Attenuating Toxines-Electrical Drying of Fruit-Telegraphing Through Space.

NEW YORK, March 18.-An interest ing example of the persistence with which the installation of electric plants is now followed up under new condi-tions is afforded in the electric-light plant at Chamberlain, S. D., which is operated by artesion-well power. Chamberlain is situated in the great subterranean water course district known as the artesian well basin of suoterranean water course district known as the artesian well basin of South Dakota. Throughout this region, which is said to embrace over 20,000 square miles in the central portion of the State, a constant flow of water, averaging about 1000 gallons per minute can be obtained by boring into the earth to a depth varying in different places, but averaging about 1000 feet. The value of such a source of water for irrigating purposes is seen in the fact that a well flowing 800 gallons per minute will cover a square mile of land one inch deep every fifteen days, or more than two feet in one year. The soil of this district is fertile, and a steady supply of moisture insures abundant crops. The thirty artesion wells already sunk in Brule county are estimated to give a flow of 70,000,000 gallons every twenty-four hours. Hardly less important than the part the artesian well will play in the future prosperity of South Dakota in the fertilization of its soil, is its new application to the generation of electricity. The Chamberlain plant is the first electrical installation in the country driven by artesion-well power. The well is 675 feet deep and eight inches in diameter. The entire body of the eightinch flow goes up twelve and one-fourth inch flow goes up twelve and one-fourthinch flow goes up twelve and one-fourthinch fiow goes up twelve and one-fourthinch stream by a nozzle, the water shoots up to a height of 182 feet. The flow is 4430 gallons per minute at a pressure of 110 pounds to the square inch, and the effective energy of the moving water is estimated as equal to 100 horse-power constantly exerted. Regulation is easily effected By simply lowering the nozzle, which throws a three-inch stream on the buckets of a Pelton water wheel, the water will go entirely under the buckets and run away through the waste pipe. At present only 500 lights are supplied from the dynamo, but it is proposed to run South Dakota. Throughout this region, a Petton water wheel, the water will away through the waste pipe. At present only 500 lights are supplied from the dynamo, but it is proposed to run other manufacturing plants with the large amount of power that is now going to waste. The location of Chamberlain on the edge of one of the greatest cattle and sheep ranges in the country makes it an exceptionally favorable point for the establishment of a creamery, or a woolen mill, or a tannery, as well as for many other industries. For a creamery the well power would be specially adapted, on account of the steadiness with which it would run the separators, and the business men of the city are already taking steps to develop the cream industry. It is said that a guarantee of 1000 cows can be secured without any difficulty in the vicinity, and sub-stations can be established across the Missouri River, and in towns east of the city, as well as north and south.

ADVANCES IN ELECTRIC HEATING

Some interesting facts in regard to the steady extension of electric heating are brought out by W. S. Hadaway, Jr. More large contracts for electric carheaters have been closed during this winter than ever before, and there is every evidence that the electric carheater has become a staple commercial device. While most of the electric carheaters now made fall to meet the conditions of ideal car-heating, the fact that several thousand cars are being equipped with them is significant testimony as to their value. As a matter of fact, the heating of cars by electricity is more expensive than by the ordinary methods, but, as a well-known streetrallway expert says, the decision for or against heating in any particular case must be reached on the distinct basis that collateral advantages and not coal economy form the real criterion. The manager of a large plant which has been using heaters this winter with a considerable expenditure of power, says that it costs him much more; in fact, about four times as much, to heat his cars by electric heaters as it did by coal stoves. He says, however, that he saves two seats in the car; the people like the system of heating, and the cars are more attractive for this reason, and that on the whole, he believes in it and would not go back to the old, system, nor would he fail to adopt electric heating if the decision were to be made again. For the heating of bulldings, electricity is rapidly making its way, especially in England and France. It received quite a stimulus from its successful application to the heating of the Vaudeville Theater in London, where a low-pressure hot-water system was used. The necessary furnace was found to be an incumbrance and an extreme inconvenience, and by using electricity his difficulty was overcome. It was found that in ordinary cold weather only two or three hours heating was required, while with the hot-water system it was impossible to limit the time, as the water took two or three hours to heat up, and the same to cool down. The electric radiator is now the favorably with other sources of heat for cooking. One singular ap ATTENUATING TOXINES. It would seem that we are on the eve of most beautiful and fascinating de-velopments in the field of the immunof most beautiful and fascinating developments in the field of the immunising of toxines. Bacteriologists have been incited to renewed activity of experimentation and research by the announcement that the play of phosphorescent light will actually kill the bacilli of tuberculosis; and the value of the Roentgen ray for the same purpose will probably soon be determined. Pending further results in both these directions, D'Arsonval and Charrin have been investigating the action of high-frequency currents on bacterial toxines. Former investigators have confined themselves to continuous currents, in which the results obtained are vitiated by the chemical action due to electrolysis. D'Arsonval and Charrin, on the other hand, have used high-frequency alternating currents, the toxine being contained in U tubes plunged in ice water in order to prevent heating. The effect of the electrical action greatly diminished the virulency of the toxines of diphtheria and pyaemia.

when tried on guinea pigs. Furthermore, the toxines, thus rendered harmless, sensibly augmented the resistance of the animals to infection of a similar kind, becoming, in fact, preventive vaccines. If this proves to be the case with the toxines of other bacteria, it will provide a much better method of attenuation than that now in use, for though in a few case this can be done by age or dying, it is usually necessary to pass the virus through the system of some unfortunate animal. A purely physical process would not only be more humane, but would give a certain and measurable result instead of one always liable to be affected by unknown factors in the constitution of the animal operated upon. The influence of the action of high-frequency alternating currents on the bacterial products of the human body is one of the subjects for new light on which electrotherapists and scientists generally are waiting with intense interest.

THE ELECTRICAL DRYING OF FRUIT. Fruit-dryers are turning their attention to electric heating, which promises to develop into a most important addition to their resources. Freshly gathered fruit must be dried before it is packed. The process, though apparently simple, necessitates great care, and if the temperature is not regulated to a nicety, there is great danger of the fruit being damaged. Large drying rooms are generally heated by steam, but in the smaller drying factories this system is not always practicable. Fuel, however, is often expensive, and water power, in parts where fruit flourishes, is usually abundant. In such situations electric heating could be used with advantage. The perfect regulation allows of any temperature being obtained, and, what is of great consequence in many such installations, practically no attention would be required. The electrical plant could also be used for lighting, and a few motors to aid the packing could easily be laid down. The gain made by the shipment of cargoes of sound fruit would far more than cover the cost of running the necessary machinery.

TELEGRAPHING THROUGH SPACE.

The possibility of telegraphing through space, which was fully demonstrated last year by W. H. Preece, has been turned to account in a most effective way for maintaining communication between the maintaining communication between the maintaining and the Fastnet lighthouse, on the southwest coast of Ireland. Formerly, the difficulties of carrying a telegraph cable up an exposed rock, where it was subject to constant chafing, were almost insuperable. The non-continuous system is now used, and works admirably. The cable terminates in the water sixty yards off, and the electric currents sent from the shore find their way through this distance to two bare wires that dip into the sea from the rock.

ERGY. A French engineer has thought it worth while to calculate the waste enworth while to calculate the waste energy of the great avalanche of Gemmi, in the Alps, which fell last September. He makes it 4,400,000,000 meter tons, or, roughly, three times the same number of foot tons, that is to say, the energy needed to lift some 13,000,000,000 tons a foot high. The fall lasted a minute, and in that time developed about a million horse-power. If the energy could have been turned into electric current, it would have fed 90,000 fecandie-power incandescent lamps five hours a day during a whole year.

A NEW DISEASE.

A NEW DISEASE.

Street car conductors have as much right to develop new diseases as workers in any other industry. This is evidently recognized, for a new disease, not down in the latest pathological catalogue, has been found for them. It is said that on a particular car line the conductors frequently reported a swelling of the eyes, accompanied by partial blindness. One of the men, who was so bad that he had to undergo medical treatment, recalled the fact that from time to time his hands grew black from contact with the brass reliing of the car when he jumped on and off. In windy weather, he had to wipe his eyes more or less, to brush away the moisture. He came to the condustion that the contact with the rall was the cause of the trouble. He was treated for metallic polsoning, and recovered without difficulty. He has since worn gloves and has had no recurrence of the alliment.

NEW SCHOOLS OPENED.

NEARLY ALL THE GRADES RUN-NING FULL TIME.

The Board of Education Decides that the Children Will Only At-tend School in the Mornings During Flesta Time.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education last evening there was a full board present, with Mr. Hale in the chair. The first business that came up was a request from the Festa Floral Committee that the High School students be represented in the floral parade by a float trimmed in the school colors, or by a coach suitably decorated and carrying a delegation from the pupils. On motion of Mr. Garland the affair was referred to Principal Housh, with the understanding that there be no expense to the board. A petition to the City Council was read, asking that the grade of Griffin avenue, be changed from 401 to 3975. As it now stands the street when graded will came about three feet above the level of the lot on which the Swainstreet school now stands. The petition was largely signed and, on motion, was also signed by the board.

The Building Committee reported that bids had been received for the sale of the old Griffin-avenue building, and that the same had been sold for $300. The committee has also advertised for bids on the old Macy-street school. On motion of Mr. Pitman it was decided that fifteen feet of land be purchased beside the Boyd-street school for $600, provided that Mackey & Young, contractors, will pay the board $75 to move the old, building. It was also moved that the City Council at once proceed to acquire more land at Thirtieth street as contemplated in the bond issue, as the building must be enlarged at an early date.

The Finance Committee reported bills to the amount of $1280.01 approved, the same being for sundries outside of the same being for sundries outside of the salary department. The report was adopted.

Superintendent Foshay presented his monthly statistical report of the schools, Among other things, he showed that there were 12,666 pupils enrolled, and that the daily average attendance was 10,243. There were 737 new pupils entered during the month, 83 promoted, 32 demoted, and 8 suspended. He also announced that a total of twenty-nine new rooms had been opened in five schoolhouses, since that it is now necessary to continue only four half-day schools, all being donfined to pupils of the first grade.

The Superintendent also reported that he had been invited to act as chairman of the children's day of La Flesta. He recommended that the school sessions during flests week be-from 9 to 12:30 only, so as to give the children opportunities to witness the afternoon parades, and to participate in the flagralsing exercises on Friday.

As the programme for the meeting of the Southern California Teachers' Association, to be held in the city the latter part of this week, is so arranged that the High School teachers will find it more profitable to attend on Thursday, he recommended that the High School teachers be given Thursday instead of Friday to attend the meeting. The report was adopted in full, as it was read.

THE CONTRACTOR'S FAULT.

The First Presbyterian Church Trus-tees not to Blame.

The news that a number of liens had been placed upon the new building of the First Presbyterian Church caused some commotion in church circles. It was at first thought that the trustees was at first thought that the trustees were unable to meet the expenses, but an interview with J. C. Salisbury, the president of the board, put a different ilght on the matter. Mr. Salisbury said: "The fault lies entirely with the contractor. Robert Jordan. The contract price of the building was $33,000, and by the contract one-fourth of this amount, $9500, was to be paid to him thirty days after the acceptance of the building by the contract on february 24. The whole truth of the matter is that Jordan started the work without sufficient capital to carry him over until the first payment, and so was that much behind when the edifice was completed. The workmen had no other recourse in law than the filing of the liens in question. These liens will of course be released when the last payment is made. The money is now in the bank, and will be paid to Mr. Jordan, but nothing accurate has reached me."

J. K. Hoffman, a prominent member of the church, said: "It is quite use-ment is made. The money is now in the bank, and will be paid to Mr. Jordan on the date promised in the contract. I have heard some stories about Mr. Jordan, but nothing accurate has reached me."

J. K. Hoffman, a prominent member of the church, said: "It is quite useless for us to make any objections to these liens. We must sit still and wait till the date arrives on which the money is to be paid to Jordan. There is not sufficient to satisfy all the claims. I am informed that Mr. Jordan bought several loads of lumber, telling the dealer that they were for the church, and that they were for the church, and that they were then used for the building of three houses that he was putting up on some property held in his wife's name. It seems as if Mr. Jordan had taken a larger contract than his capital would warrant."

The board of trustees of the First Presbyterian Church is composed of well-known business men of the city. The board comprises five members, J. C. Salisbury, president; J. S. Slauson, J. M. Witmer, George H. Stewart and D. R. Brearley.

The total amount of the liens filed is $16,514.11, the aggregate number being fifty-one. As there is only $9500 to be paid to Mr. Jordan on March 30, there will be a small deficiency of $7014.11 that he has to make up. From which it will be assumed that Mr. Jordan has not made a large fortune off this particular contract.

Two, Low Characters Who Smoked Oplum.

As usual, Monday was a busy day in the Police Court. Of all the lengthy list of offenders, who appeared before Justice Owens, will but a few were there for getting drunk.

Side by side within the railing sat May Richter, Rosa Wilson and George Davis, three prisoners from the tenderloin district, all charged with vastancy. The Wilson woman will plead today. The other two vagrants were found together in a lodging-house, smoking optum. They were recognized as a lellen woman and her "mac." They will appear in court again at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Tom Hanley, Joe Brown and Joe Smith, three men who engaged in a street row, were told to appear again this afternoon.

Peter Rochl and Peter Comachi are two candy peddlers who blockaded the street at Westlake by their little pusher carts. They refused to move on, and release the jam, when requested to do so, and were accordingly arrested. Peter Rochl will be tried this afternoon. Peter No. 2 had his case taken under advisement.

George Blackenberg and John Vance, two men who are accused of stealing a sack of tinner's tools, had their trial for petty larceny set for this afternoon. Justice Morrison dealt forth justice worth weeks. With the exception of the continuing to be reset of the case against H. H. Cross, charged with a violation, of the liquor license ordinance, the only criminal business which came before him was continued vagrancy cases.

Clarence Watson is a low character, who was arrested February 3 by Officers Henderson and Harris. Justice Morrison yesterday continued his case to March 25.

NOT CONDUCIVE TO STUDY.

A Band of Boys Which Aroused

Schoolmaster's Wrath.

Young Robert Sturgess was arrested yesterday for disturbing the air of studious quiet which hangs round the Union-avenue school, by sundry yells, whistles, cat-calls, shrieks and boisterous talk.

Frederick W. Stine is the principal of the Union-avenue school. He has been greatly bothered lately by a gang of young hoodlums who advance upon the school while the pupils are all at work inside, and raise the most unearthly racket under the windows. None of the little toughs are pupils of the school, but all of them devete their undivided attention to pestering the pupils in hours and out.

Mr. Stine's patience was worn out. He vowed to stop the thing; yesterday morning Officer Long arrested Robert Sturgess, the leader of the gang, on a warrant charging him with disturbing the peace. The offender was released on his own recognizance and trial set for March 28 at 2 o'clock.

It is said by some of the victims of this peculiar system of lubrication that they are employed to do mechanical and other work upon the paper at a stated salary, and when time for the payment of that salary arrives they are requested to take 25 per cent. of their earnings in stock in the paper, and are virtually compelled to accept what amounts to only 75 per cent. of the contract price. Some of these holders of stock who are no longer connected with the paper, and who still hold the stock, and some of the holders who are still connected with the institution are wondering just how much they would have to contribute toward bolstering the paper up should it get into difficulties, and whether their assessments would be the full legal limit, which under the laws of the Bate is largely in excess of the par value of the stock held.

The members of the Sons of St. George in Pasadena indignantly deny the imputation. They say that in the first place while beer is served with their luncheons, no member is allowed more than two glasses, while the majority take only one, and that no man of all the membership ever over-indulged at any of their meetings, or conducted himself in an unseemly manner.

CITY COUNCIL

The full Board of Trustees, as at present constituted, was represented at the meeting of the Council this afternoon. The session was devoted entirely to the consideration of routine work al-ready brought before the board, and was largely consumed in discussion of the Marengo-avenue paving protest, and the widening of Lake avenue. Mr. Metcalfe appeared in the former case, and reiterated his belief that property owners who have signed a petition for work have a right to protest, and stated that it was his belief that no contractor would bid on the work. Trustee Washburn moved that action be postponed, as Mr. Metcaife stated that on account of the improvement of Union street and Colorado street some of the property-owners felt that the proposed improvement would be a heavy burden. Judge Weed suggested that the matter be deferred from week to week, and that Mr. Metcalfe come each week, charging the property-owners for his services, and in the course of time they would conclude it cheaper to have the work done. The motion to postpone was lost. The next matter for consideration was the protest, and no action was taken, as it was decided to defer the matter another week. There is still a difference of opinion between the City Attorney and Mr. Metcalfe regarding the right of property-owners who have petitioned for an improvement to protest against the same after the legal formalities have been begun by the board.

Mr. Lockwood appeared on behalf of the movement to widen Lake avenue, and stated to the Council that since the street had been made with the stipulated provision that 75 per cent. of the frontage should be obtained, and since that amount had not been obtained the property-owners interested, many of them who were there present, asked that the board should abandon all proceedings, and condemn sufficient property from San Pasqual street northward to Colorado, to widen the street six feet on each side, and establish an assessment district, which should not extend south of San Pasqual street. This action was asked for because relying on the intention of the board as expressed in its resolution, and upon the assurance of the board that they might so do, certain property-owners who had made dedication of the required strip of their land, had made improvements. A long discussion of the validity of those grants followed, and when Judge Weed moved for a rescinding of the resolution of intention were passed ordering work on North Moline avenue, and rescinding a resolution for the improvement of a portion of Union street. This latter resolution was passed in order that Union street between Raymond and should have a specially constructed curb and guiter. The rest of the street

BOSTON, March 23.—Literary Boston was astounded last week to learn that Charles S. Saint Zelicki, a bright young literateur of Polish extraction was the notorious burglar who plun was the notorious burgiar who plun-dered Back Bay flats of jewelry valued in the thousands. He said he did it to avoid starving. The police say he did it to satisfy the cravings for money and the jewels of his landlady, Mrs. Frank L. Tupper, who, within a fortnight, separated from her husband on his account. Now the wife is suing her husband for a divorce on the ground of cruelty, while the husband will retali-ate in kind, naming Saint Zelicki as co-crueity, while the husband will retaliate in kind, naming Saint Zelicki as corespondent.

Mrs. Tupper is an exceedingly handsome young woman, refined and well educated. To a reporter she said: "My husband's charge is false. That I received jewels from Charley is true, but the police have taken them away. I loved him; I do yet. I am sure my husband cannot prove his statements. Were he in San Francisco he would never dare repeat them. Yes; I am a Californian. My father is a contractor in San Francisco, and lived on Nob Hill. I cannot tell his name; it's bad enough for me to be mixed up with a burgiar."

Frank L. Tupper says: "I felt that sooner or later my wite's acquaintance with this man would become known. Her conduct grew so unbearable that a week before Christmas I turned her out of my house. She was constantly in the company of the young burgiar. Before this man's arrest she visited my mother's house and induced our little girl to accompany her to her room. The child told me of many things she saw. No, I cannot tell you her maiden name, I married her in San Francisco, where her father is doing business as a contractor. It would not be right to show him up. He always used me right."

(Phoenix, Ariz., Gazette:) One of the greatest sources of revenue this spring has been from the sale of fat cattle. Nearly a half-million dollars has been brought into the Salt River Valley from this source alone during the past sixty days, yet the supply of beefers does not seem to be materially diminished. This has had a tendency to throw the balance of trade our way, consequently money is growing more plentiful.

(San Francisco Bulletin:) The insult offered to the American flag by a drunken Englishman in the presence of a couple of American naval officers at Honolulu is not a matter of great moment, perhaps, except as showing that American naval officers abroad would do well to be a little choice of their company.

OFFICE OF THE TIMES,

Los Angeles, March 23, 1896. THE OUTLOOK FOR MONEY. The THE OUTLOOK FOR MONEY. The savings banks of San Francisco have less money on hand than they had a few months ago. It is estimated by a San Francisco paper that the savings banks of that city have now on deposit between two and three million dollars less than three months ago. It should not, however, be supposed that there is any shortage of money in the northern part of the State. A little time ago there was more money than could be used, now there is enough for all legitimate purposes. The improved feeling in many branches of industry throughout the State during the past few months has led to a more healthy demand for money for business purposes, for the development of mines, and for the improvement of real estate in city and country. The San Francisco Chronicle of Friday last has the following encouraging remarks in regard to the financial outlook for the State:

and country. The San Francisco Chronicle of Friday last has the following encouraging remarks in regard to the financial outlook for the State:

"The demand for loans is good, and there is a certain ease in making them, especially on business and fine residence property, as values are considered to have reached bedrock, and the basis is regarded as absolutely safe. With danger of drought averted the development of mining and the wine industry on a profitable footing, it is expected that at least $60,000,000 will be poured into California circulation this year from grain, fruit, wines and the increased gold product. This should place the State in magnificent condition, and consequently strengthen the San Francisco real estate market. Already there is a better feeling, a disposition is shown by the middle class to recommence buying, and the spring market is in satisfactory shape. Under these circumstances the talk of hard times is out of date."

TAXES ON WINE. The wine mer chants of the central part of the State are much worked up over recent cases in which the agents of the Internal chants of the central part of the State are much worked up over recent cases in which the agents of the Internal Revenue Department have compelled fourteen large wine merchants in Napa and Santa Clara counties to pay taxes to the government as wholesale liquor dealers. The question is one that is likely to be of considerable interest to wine-makers in Southern California. The tax amounts to $100 per annum, and the agents have also been collecting back taxes at the same rate, in some cases as far back as five years.

According to the San Francisco papers this activity of the revenue agents has caused a small panic among the big wine merchants, for the collection of the tax is based upon an interpretation of the law under which few of them can hope to escape. The revenue agents claim that any winemaker who has in past years bought wines from his neighbor, either for blending or distilling purposes, and has afterward sold the product, is liable for the tax as a wholesale liquor dealer. There are few wineries of any pretensions but what have engaged in this practice, and it is the plan of the revenue people to bring every one of them to bar and compel them, if possible, to pay up.

It is said that an organized effort will be made by the principal producers in Central California to resist the payment of the tax and make a test case. The San Francisco Chronicle gives the following details in regard to the question at issue:

"The dispute is chiefiy as to the point at which wine can be considered as finished and fit for the market. Under the laws of the government any winemaker can sell his own product without being amenable to the tax. The claim of the internal revenue authorities is that wine is finished the moment fermentation is over, and that if they use the new wines of their neighbors they are only providing so much raw material, the same as when they buy grapes from another vineyard. The winemaker assert that they have the better end of the argument, as it will be easy to obtain all the testimony they rial, the same as when they buy grapes from another vineyard. The wine-makers assert that they have the better end of the argument, as it will be easy to obtain all the testimony they want on this point.

"Meanwhile the revenue authorities are going ahead. It is thought that if they can get at the books of the largest wineries, which they undoubtedly can in case the winemaker has been manufacturing sweet wines or brandy, between 100 and 125 firms and individuals can be mulcted for taxes for this and preceding years. The revenue agents have been contemplating an investigation of this sort for some months, and were only waiting the outcome of inquiries in another direction to institute this can. GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS.

REFINING LOS ANGELES OIL. In considering the possibilities of utilizing the oil that is produced in Los An-geles city it has hitherto always been taken for granted that it was not pos-the oil that is produced in Los Angeles city it has hitherto always been taken for granted that it was not possible to profitably manufacture therefrom any illuminant, for the reason that the Los Angeles oil contains on an average only about 3 per cent. of kerosene, the gravity of the oil being about 14½, which is only about half the average of other California oils, and considerably less than half the gravity of Pennsylvania oils.

Dr. Frederick Salathe of this city, who was formerly connected with the Standard and other eastern oil companies, as an expert, and was for some time at Santa Paula, in Ventura county, has perfected a new process of refining, which, if all that is claimed for it is realized, will work a revelation in the treatment of Los Angeles oils, and add greatly to the value of the product. Dr. Salathe has been experimenting with California oils for seven years, and prior to that time had for seventeen years been experimenting with the oils of the world. During the past year he has devoted his attention to Los Angeles oils. Hitherto the best that could be done in refining these oils was to obtain a distillate of 6 per cent, of which about 3 per cent. was kerosene. From 28 deg. California crude oil, produced outside of the city, there has been obtained on an average about 32 per cent. of 40 deg. distillate, of which about 12 per cent. has been available for kerosene. By this new process Dr. Salathe says he can produce 55 per cent. of 40 deg. distillate, of which about 12 per cent. has been available for kerosene, while from 28 deg. California crude oil he can obtain 70 per cent. of 40 deg. distillate, of which 40 per cent. is available for kerosene, while from 28 deg. California crude oil he can obtain 70 per cent. of 40 deg. The Puente oil that is being refined at Chino, runs about 35 deg.

The following figures show the constituents that are obtained from Los Angeles oil-of 14½ deg. by the oid and new process, the figures being from water-free oil:

Old New Process.

to get a law passed providing for the inspection of oil as to fire test. If this were done it would make it difficult for other refiners to produce oil that would pass muster.

A number of other valuable products have been manufactured by Dr. Salathe from California oil. Ammonia has been obtained by a special operation as a by-product in refining, the article being produced in paying quantities. Dr. Salathe has discovered in California crude oils a product called ichtyol. This substance is largely used as an antiseptic, and is imported exclusively from Germany by one firm in New York, where it sells at the wholesale price of $7 a pound.

Carbolic acid has been isolated in quantities of nearly one-tenth of 1 percent. from distillates obtained during the process of refining.

One advantage of the distillates obtained by this process is that they do not darken under exposure to light or air, which is a great drawback to the California distillates. Lubricating oils of the highest order in color, as well as viscosity, have been made by Dr. Salathe.

One of the most interesting products manufactured is a vulcanite board, which is made by a mixture of asphaltum with another substance, under a peculiar process. The board ranges in thickness from one-sixteenth of an inch to one-half an inch. The uses to which this article may be put are numerous. It makes an indestructible fire-proof roofing for private houses or business blocks, the cost being little more than that of ordinary shingles. It is also useful for insulating purposes, in place of hard rubber; for liming refrigerators, refrigerator cars, etc. It will stand a temperature of 500 deg. Fahr. In addition to the articles mentioned, valuable paints and varnishes may be produced from these oils. Dr. Salathe maintains that the lack of success that has hitherto frequently attended the treatment of California oils is due to the fact that a different method must be applied to them to that which is used in the East. It is more of a chemical operation than a simple distill one-fourth of the crude oil that re-mains after distillation.

About a year which he was sentenced. About a year ago he swore to a complaint before Recorder J. G. Roseiter of Pasadena, charging a man named C. S. Howard with disturbing one of his meetings. Howard was acquitted and Howland was arrested for perjury. An information was filed against him, he was convicted and sentenced to two years in San Quentin. The Supreme Court today decided on appeal that the information should be dismissed, and Howland discharge from custody. It holds the lower court never had jurisdiction, because the information did not state where the offense was committed."

In view of the strenuous efforts that In view of the strenuous efforts that have been made by the little band of followers of Howland the news conveyed by this dispatch will cause little surprise. The circumstances of Howland's career in Pasadena and his case in the Recorder's court, with his subsequent conviction, are yet fresh to the memory of newspaper readers. His trial brought out the fact that he had a black record in the East. His profane declaration that "me and God" could cure any disease from corns to appendicitis by the laying on of hands made him a marked man in Pasadena, and scandal linked his name with the female members of more than one family. As his Nemesis, Howard, has gone East the liberated Howland may follow him to seek satisfaction, though it would be more like him to come back to Pasadena and pose as a martyr among his disciples.

The Rev. Amanda Deyo preached her farewell sermon to San Diegans on Sunday night at the Universalist Church. She has labored in this field for two years, and returns east because it is physically impossible to continue her work. This charming woman has worked here successfully. In her closing remarks she deprecated the expenditure of Uncle Sam of $100.000.000 for warships, declaring that far better results would accrue if that amount of money was spent in irrigation systems throughout the West.

John C. Wunder, one of the men interested in the $160.000 breweary now building here, says: "For eight years I have had San Diego in mind intending all this time to establish a big brewery here. Los Angeles tried hard to get us to build the brewery there, but I would not think of it. So far as the future of the two cities is concerned. San Diego is incomparably ahead, and has every advantage." John is heartily applauded by the people who believe as he does. He says that other eastern manufacturers of national reputation have their eye on San Diego. "Tis well "tis well. The more the mer-

At 10:30 o'clock, a man passing by saw the flames inside the building, and rushed in. He found Kendallson lying helpless in the midst of the fire, and stupid from fright. The fire was quickly extinguished, but not before Kendallson was fatally burned. All the akin was burned from his hand and his head and breast were also badly injured. As soon as a doctor could be summoned the man was taken to rooms across the street, where his wounds were dressed. Kendallson had for years been partly paralyzed in one side of his body, and this no doubt prevented him from escaping from the fire when he first awoke. He has no relatives so far as known. Late last night Kendallson was removed to the County Hospital, where he died at 2 o'clock this morning.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED. J. Andrew Bachman, a sailor, 22 years old, was run over by a soda-water wagon near La Mesa Springs, Saturday, being injured about the abdomen so severely that he died this morning. Some circumstances surrounding the supposed accident led to the belief that he might have had a fight with his companion, and an inquest is being held today. His companion has not yet been found.

Mrs. Austin was absent at the time, and Mr. Austin, his three sons, and three other young men became violently sick just after supper. A dish of canned berries, from which all partook, is supposed to have been the cause of the trouble. When a doctor arrived the whole party was somewhat relieved, and have now recovered.

meet tonight (Monday.) They have been in secret session today and have decided that they will call tonight a massmeeting of the citizens of Pomona at an early day to discuss the proposition to construct a system of public sewers. The Trustees argue that with a system of public waterworks that is to be begun here in a few weeks the sewerage of this place can be easily operated, and that never before, and perhaps never again may a system of sewers be laid so cheaply as now. 'ity Engineer Sanders has been at work upon plans and maps for the proposed sewerage for some weeks, and he finds that a plant such as Pomona needs can be had for some sum between $46,000 and $50,000. It is proposed to have the sewage farm on the Currier ranch, among the hills south of Spadra, and remote from any home. Mr. Currier will give this city free use of the land for forty-nine years.

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The seventh annual session of the Orange County Teachers' Institute opened this morning at the Congregational Church at 9:30. The roll-call found nearly all the teachers in their places, later trains bringing in all delinquents. The programme was opened by Prof. Themse P. Bailey of the University of California, subject, "The Coordination of Studies." The thought ol Prof. Bailey's address was that schools are to give a development of character, and that the foundation for character is the habit of work, the habit of overcoming difficulties and sticking to a thing till worked out. Above all things he would like to see a correlation of family. State, church and school. Prof. Charles H. Keyes of Paladena followed in much the same sentiments, advocating that no character-building counts that does not put hard work into the boy. His theme was "Blessed be Durdgery." Both took the motto, "So do your work that you may live for your work." Prof. Keyes urged that common schools requirwork done by pupils outside of books during time outside of school in order to keep the boy off the street. The children require manual training, and manual training plants will not be found in the small villages for a number of years. The same two gentlemen addressed the meeting along the same lines during the afternoon.

Mrs. A. Padgham furnished a pleasant break in the afternoon session by rendering a plano solo.

No Tidings of the Missing Southern Pacific Agent.

SAN PEDRO, March 23.—(Regular Correspondence.) No further tidings of F. W. Leach, the Southern Pacific agent who disappeared last Monday, have been heard, Joseph Weldt saw Leach in Los Angeles at about noon on that day. Leach was walking northerly along the east side of North Main street. He was walking rapidly, but from the fact he had passed Commercial street when seen it is supposed he was not on his way to take a train. A former railroad employé who has had a good deal of experience in railroad matters, said today he did not think it possible Leach could have been much over $300 behind in his accounts. The receipts for tickets he did not think would exceed $30 on ordinary days, and under the company's system of checking he could not have gotten behind more than three or four days without detection. The only manner he could be a shortage on freight accounts would be to report as still on hand freight which had been taken away and paid for. Some of Leach's friends say that for the past few months he seemed to be preoccupied, as if some matter were weighing heavily on his mind.

Since writing the above it has been learned definitely that the amount of shortage was 1319. His wages for one and one-half months were due him, so the net shortage would therefore be reduced to about $200. Leach left $30 in the cash drawer when he went away, which fact his friends say is strong evidence that he did not intend to rob the company. No Tidings of the Missing Southern Pacific Agent.

Books and the Theater.

Books and the Theater.

(Kansas City Star:) In an article in the current number of Harper's Weekly which voices the prevalent dissatisfaction with the excessive price of seats at theaters. Mr. Howells says: "A dollar is more than any performance is worth, and I think that when more is asked the intending purchaser will do well to turn from the box office and buy a book." Mr. Howells fortifies this opinion by the suggestions that when the book is once read the owner will still have it and may enjoy it again without additional cost, while a ticket for the theater is good for but one performance; that the pleasure of the book may be prolonged through several evenings without the discomfort of leaving one's fireside to slop through bad weather and sit cramped through a three-hours' constraint with the inevitable exposure to draughts which is encountered at the theater.

There is more than a modicum of logic in the position of Mr. Howells on this question; but, nevertheless, books cannot take the place of the theater, and the person who substitutes them for the delights of the drama from motives of economy or any other reason, suffers a costly loss. The theater vastly increases the enjoyment and the beauty of books. No history nor fiction on the written page can make so strong and indelible an impression tain the mind and memory as the same olistory and the same romance portrayed on the mimic stage. It has become the fashion to dramatize popular novels, and it is through these histrionic adaptations that the works become most widely known and most fully appreciated. The reader of books may form a shadowy impression of a persa or a place or an event described in fiction. But when he sees the moving scene on the stage, his conception of the character and incidents is distinct and personal and ineffaceable.

The beauty, the refinement, the luxury which the novelist writes about or the squalor and deformity which he seeks to convey to the mind's eye become real and palpable when they are revealed before the footlights, and the picture never fades. Morals and manners alike are taught with a vivid force from the stage which is not within the power of books.

It is true that there is, in general, much cause for complaint about the prices which are charged by theater managers. The rates for the desirable performances are usually so high as to prove a hardship to those who pay them, and persons of moderate resources are thus too often defrauded of a most profitable source of amuse ment. The popular-price theaters have afforded much relief, but the "bright particular stars" do not appear at these cheaper playhouses, and the enjoyment of great dramatic and lyric celebrities is still attended with severe financial exactions.

Cove in the Salvation Army.

(Chicago Post.) Courtship is defined by the Salvation Army lawgiver as that intimate intercourse and friendliness which generally precedes marriage. Gen. Booth has not attempted to regulate the spheres in their courses, but he has jotted down a few regulations on "Courtship" that bring this interesting idlosyncrasy of impressionable natures within the prosaic discipline of army rules. In the first place he decrees that it should be "entered upon and conducted in such a manner as is in harmony with the duty and work of a Salvationist."

In harmony with the duty and work of a Salvationist."

Whenever the young soldier's fancy "lightly turns to thoughts of love," as even a Salvationist's must in the springtime, he is bidden to approach "the subject in the light of the Articles of Marriage," which form another chapter in Gen. Booth's "Orders and Regulations."

If after considering whether the coject of his affections would be likely to take kindly to the articles of marriage as laid down for the army he concludes that she would not, he must at once decide that a marriage with such a fair one, though she have the attributes of an unwinged angel, would not be likely to turn out happlily. Therefore he must forego the tender delights, the hopes and fears, the fascinating uncertainties, the pangs of absence, the heart-flutterings of presence and all the pangs and caramels of courtship. If otherwise, no restrictions are placed upon the raptures and tantalizing doubts to which he can submit himself.

But no soldier "should commence courting with anyone who is not already a soldier, or who is unwilling to become one immediately." This is a courting with anyone who is not already a soldier, or who is unwilling to become one immediately." This is a harsh limitation to place upon the eccentricities of a passion that levels all ranks and "lays the shepherd's crook beside the scepter"—or words to that effect in the fervid language of the late Claude Melnotte.

With cold, casculating caution Gen. Booth's orders warn the susceptible soldier against rushing into courtship until "the question of becoming an officer has been absolutely settled." It is necessary to explain here that in Salvation Army circles only officers receive pay and they only enough to subsist on the hither side of respectable starvation.

sist on the hither side of respectable starvation.

The orders look askance on all courtships begun before joining the army and recommend that they be given up by mutual consent. But a promise of marriage is an agreement which no salvation can break honorably, and "the army cannot take the responsibility to urge the breaking of an engagement which has once been entered into, other than by mutual consent or under extraordinary circumstances."

sent or under extraordinary circumstances."

Soldiers are warned against wasting any "more time than is really necessary for the purpose of courting." This regulation puts us out of all patience with Gen. Booth. Has he forgotten the days when he went courting the sweet-faced mother of all the little miniatures of himself, now grown into guch beautiful or able commanders? Time wasted in courting, forsooth—the thing is impossible. No lover, soldier or civilian, ever spent a really unnecessary moment in courting. The whole trouble has always been to find time enough.

There are many other regulations on trouble has always been to find time enough.

There are many other regulations on this universal subject, but they have lost their interest now that we have let our readers know the depths of Gen. Booth's ignorance of the infinitude of time necessary to do courtship justice.

Washington's Boyhood.

(Woodrow Wilson, in Harper's Magazine:) A boy who was much at Mt. Vernon and at Mr. Fairfax's seat, Belivior, might expect to see not a little that was worth seeing of the life of the colony. George was kept at school until he was close upon 16; but there was ample vacation time for visiting. Mrs. Washington did not keep him at her apron strings. He even lived, when it was necessary, with his brother, Augustine, at the old home on Bridges Creek, in order to be near the best school that was accessible, while the mother was far away on the farm that lay upon the Rappahannock. Mrs. Washington saw to it, nevertheless, that she should not lose sight of him altogether. When he was 14 it was proposed that he should be sent to see, as so many lads were, no doubt, from that maritime province; but the prudent mother preferred he should not leave Virginia, and the schooling went on as before—the schooling of books and manly sports. Every lad learned to ride—to ride coit or horse, regardless of training, gait, or temper—in that country, where no one went afoot except to catch his mount in the pasture. Every lad, black or white, bond or free, knew where to find and how to take the roving game in the forests. And young Washington, robust boy that he was, not to be daunted while that strong spirit sat in him which he got from his father and mother alike, took his apprentieship on horseback and in the tangled woods with characteristic zest and ardor.

He was, above all things else, a capable executive boy. He loved mastery, and he relished acquiring the most effective means of mastery in all practical affairs. His very exercise books used at school gave proof of it. They were filled not only with the rules, formulae, diagrams and exercises of surveying, which he was taking special pains to learn, at the advice of his friends, but also with careful copies of legal and mercantile papers, bills of exchange, bills of sale, bonds, indentures, land warrants, leases, deeds and wills as if he meant to be a lawyer's or a merchant's clerk. It would seem that, passionate and full of warm blood as he was, he conned these things as he studied the use and structure of or a merchant's clerk. It would seem that, passionate and full of warm blood as he was, he conned these things as he studied the use and structure of his fowling-piece, the bridle he used for his colts, his saddle-girth, and the best ways of mounting. He copied these forms of business as he might have copied Beverley's account of the way fox or 'possum or beaver was to be taken or the wild turkey trapped. The men he most admired, his elder brothers, Mr. Fairfax, and the gentlemen planters who were so much at their houses, were most of them sound men of business, who valued good surveying as much as they admired good horsemanship and skill in sport. They were their own merchants, and looked upon forms of business paper as quite as useful as plows and hogsheads. Careful exercise in such matters might well enough accompany practice in the equality formal minuet in Virginia. And so this boy learned to show in almost everything he did the careful precision of the perfect marksman.

MINING IN MEXICO.

How the Work is Carried On at Minas Prietas.

Half a Million in Gold Produced Each Month.

Discomforts of Life Endured for the Sake of the Yellow Metal Stored Enormous Deposits Below Ground.

(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.) MINAS PRIETAS (Sonora, Mex., March 21.—Gold does not owe its value to its rarity. Gold is not rare. There is plenty of it, for any man. From Alaska to Patagonia there is hardly a squar mile in the long mountain chain that does not have the glorious stuff. The trouble with it is that it is not waiting to be shoveled up in sacks and carted off to the mint. It is disseminated, finer than flour, finer than the naked eye can see it, all through quartz of porphyry or other formations. Getting it out is where it gets its value. It must be found, mined, developed, capitalized and milled before it can be coined, and there is where the value comes in. In fact, approximately, gold is worth about what it costs to produce. A man may stand within a stone's throw of a million dollars' worth of gold, any man's gold, and it not worth a 10-cent piece to him. It is too much disseminated—too "low grade" it is called. Many a capirate in what look like monstrous tubs. The quicksliver is in there, daintily picking the free gold from the muddy mess and adding it to its own white volume, rejecting what was once the rock that has hidden it since the world. began. Away again, after escaping the selection of quicksliver, it goes; thick, reddish stuff of the consistency of mud puddles, to be given the ordeal of pure running water in the concentrators. reddish stuff of the consistency of mud puddles, to be given the ordeal of pure running water in the concentrators. Concentrating is a teasing process for the metal of trying to climb up hill with an endless belt, against the opposition of water coming down the incline of the belt to carry it back. The opposition has two effects, the heavy constituents of the muddy water, the metal and, of course, the gold, settle to the bottom and stay with the belt, as, inch by inch, it attains its ascendancy, and stores away the precious stuff in the under side; while the mere mud rises and mingles with the water, befouls it, and is carried away.

Once a month there comes a day of oppressive silence in the camp. The stamps are inert, for this is the time of the monthly clean-up. The quicksilver, surcharged with gold, in which form it is called amalgam, is withdrawn and replaced with the pure metal. Then the amalgam is put into the retort, an iron cylinder six feet long and a foot in diameter, and heated till the gold runs off into beautiful bars of bullion, while the quicksilver betakes itself off, purified and ready for more gold.

a foot in diameter, and neaded of polition, while the quicksilver betakes itself off, purified and ready for more gold. At one of the mills of the camp they have lately taken out the old retorts and replaced them with new ones. These old cylinders will be carefully broken up and smelted, for in them gold has acumulated until they are now rich to the extent of probably 20 or 30 per cent, gold.

the extent of probably 20 or 30 per t, gold, a the camp there are four mills: a marillas, twenty stamps; the and Central, ten stamps; the Colono, thirty stamps; and the Prietas, ty stamps. The output is hard of mation. The gold is sent out irreguly, and while there is little secrecy ut it, certainly it is done without entation. Probably half a million a nth would be a modest estimate. The creston and Colorado Company in the Creston and Colorado mines the Colorado mill. The Prietas is they have leased. The owners a stock company, belonging prinally in Cleveland. The most promit stockholders are Mrs. Price and daughter, Mrs. Hines. Minor insets are also held in Mexico. The arillas is a local concern, belonging the colorado-ton concern. Mrs. Hines, who is superintendent of the Colorado-ton concern. Mr. Hines's profit in the Amarillas is from $60,000 to 100 per month. The Grand Central inder the Amarillas is management, transaction having been recently consummated. It was bought here a few weeks ago of F. H. Seymour of England, for $150,000. Within three hours after the deal was made Mr. Sey-mour was offered $250,000 for the prop-erty. He stated that his word had been mour was offered $250,000 for the property. He stated that his word had been given already on the deal, and that he would not go back on it. The Grand Central, in addition to its ten stamps, is being fitted up for the Huntingdon mill of about equal capacity, formerly on the Verde property. While these are not the largest mills in the world, our own United States having many bigger, yet for the number of stamps it is likely that the output is the largest on earth.

LINDERNEATH THE GROUND.

UNDERNEATH THE GROUND. The treasure that nature has stored underground in the mines of this camp The treasure that nature has stored underground in the mines of this camp is enormous. The Creston is said to be the best of the lot. To date the production is estimated at $90,000,000. And men about the property say they would rather have a quarter of what is left there, with the appliances on the ground for extraction, than what has been taken out. The ore body is from ten to fifty feet in width and varies in value from $15$ at ton into the thousands. While there is a general richness to the ore that gives the mines stability, occasional rich pockets are struck that send profits skyward. So rich is this ore that the Mexican miners set about its extraction to their personal profit. At times almost as large a force is kept to watch that the miners do not steal as is at the actual mining. In the past numerous dodges have been resorted to to secure the gold. They are great cigarette smokers, and rolls of cigarettes have been found from which the tobacco had been thrown away and whe gold from the ledge rolled in, instead. Gold has been swallowed, and otherwise concealed about the person within buckskin pouches. A year or two ago in the Creston about $1600 worth of extremely rich ore was found by the shift boss cached away in the mine, awaiting the opportunity for removal. One day the superintendent saw a red handkerchief on the waste dump. As the ore and waste are of a reddish hue it was not easily distinguished. He found in it about $900 in gold tied up. The miners had taken the chance of having it thrown out without discovery, and then recovering it at night. Doubtless some of the attempts at thievery have been successful, for only those that were not were reported. About the camp there have been dealers who bought the ore obtained by these "gambrusinos," gettling it at ridiculously low rates. It has been said that the miners live rather on what they steal than the $150 a day (Mexican) that they earn honestly.

Besides a socre or perhaps a hundred prosects and more or less developed is enormous. The Creston is said to

The gold of this Minas Prietas camp helped to enrich Rome and Spain hundreds of years ago. Here was one of the treasure houses which the Jesuits transferred to their own. They came and worked their rude processes, mining from the surface in open cuts, and "packing" the ore to the surface in rawhide buckets, on the shoulders of peons, and milling with arastras, or crude adobe smelters and wood fuel. Centuries rolled on and the padres died and were replaced with others, but there came no change, no improvement. Just as they were operated 200 years before, so they were in 1859.

The present site of Prietas produces little water, and in the early days of the Jesuits, none at all. The ore was hauled from the camp, from what is today the site of the Prietas, to where water could be found, fifteen miles away, at a place they called Algame. At this place today are found ruins of shallow wells, 400 arastras, numerous adobe smelters and many tanks. These tanks are made of a crude and wonderful cement, being today in perfect preservation and as hard as stone. They were used for a leaching process, somewhat like a similar method of today, and indicate that the padres were metallurgists of a high order.

The tailings of these workings are being utilized by modern methods and enterprise today. An English company has been cyaniding on them, with big profits. The tailings are practically without limit and vary in values, some of them being very rich.

In 1859 the Jesuits went out of business in Mexico. This was the year in which the government deposed the Catholic Church. One of the effects of this overthrow was that operations ceased at the Prietas. When left the Minas Prietas had been worked to the water level, or about 200 feet down.

Chamberlain and Price were two assayers from Cleveland, O., in the country looking for a likely prospect. They were both poor, having practically nothing. They ran across the Colorada, and bought it of Ricado Johnson for $10,000. The funds they obtained from friends in Ohlo, giving a mortsage on the property for se-

The first price was $10,000, which loan was quickly repaid from the output of the property. Johnson, however, was not satisfied. Whether rightly so or not, he claimed that the sale was made on a contingency that he was to get more, in case the mine developed favorably. The buyers resisted. These latter negotiations were made in the United States. One day the buyers received a telegram that another rich find had been struck, and advising that Johnson be bought off at any price. This was done. Johnson, unaware of the new find, was asked his price to cease all further annoyance as to his claims. He set his figure at $150,000 and the amount was paid. The mine has since produced in the neighborhood of $20,000,000.

Howell Hines came into the camp about 1890, an assayer for the company. He subsequently was made superintendent, and married Miss Price, daughter of one of the partners. He is principal stockholder in the Amarillas, and is very comfortably fixed for this world's goods today.

Developments succeed each other in the camp now so fast that the residents can hardly keep track of them. En route from Fracier & Chalmers for the Colorado-Creston management is 1,500,000 pounds of machinery. Mills have gone up, holsts been put in, diamond drills sent feeling in all directions and men put at work till there is no recording it all. Almost everybody connected with the management has got rich from it.

At present there is a deal on foot there, that will probably surpass in came to a big ore chamber. Here the aspect was decided infernal. The air on entrance became more and more oppressive. It was hot and moist and painful, in terrible contrast to the dry and healing air of the plains above. About on a huge scaffording through the length of the chamber the same boys we had seen above were at work. The bare, tawny bodies were saturated with perspiration, and gleamed back the reflection of dozens of candles hung about the chamber. They were not well formed as a lot. Their chests were disproportionately large, and the whole upper body seemed developed out of proportion to the lower limbs. They were engaged in putting drills home in the quartz, and swung their two-handed hammers with a dexterity, grace and precision that was pretty to see. One miner held the drill straight upward into the whole, while another with easy swings was hitting it regular and rapid blows. The boys were the same boisterous, devil-may-care lot lately at the hoist, and had good-natured comments in Spanish at the sketch I made of them.

Striking fire in one corner of 'he chamber was one of the Burley drills at work. Compresed air is the source of the power. The hole is made by a combination blow and revolution, with far greater speed than can be done by hand. The machines are in charge of the Mexicans, one standing by with a cow's-horn cup throwing water in the hole. These drills are used whenever practicable throughout the mine. The capacity of the present air-compressor in the holst building above is twenty drills; but it will shortly be replaced with a fifty-drill compressor.

When the shots have been fired, the miners rapidly shovel up the ore into the cars, run it to the shaft, and it is sent flying heavenward to the light of day.

We went through the eighth level, which is only in course of development. Tunnels, cross-cuts, wings and stopes were found, all incomplete. Only two levels of this wonderful mine haye been worked out, the first and the second. In all the rest there is ore, and the greater the depth the greater the depth the greater the richness. I did not go down to the nine hundred, as this I am told, was hotter

yet. This, too, is being developed, and shows gratifying richness. The shaft is down 950 feet. Another hoist is heing put in, which will permit working to a depth of 1500 fcet. Thousand but for the present calculations are only for a depth of 1500 fcet. The shaft will be made triple-compartment for this depth. At present it is only double-compartment. Back to the shaft we went, away from the deafening racket of hand-drills and Burleys and Spanish language, as foul as the air. The heat became less oppressive and breathing once more without trouble.

We stepped again into the cage. Away up and up, high as the sky itself, it seemed, was a little white spot in the great darkness, that seemed about an inch square. It was the mouth of the shaft. The cage went up as swiftly and easily as it had descended. More flashes of light, and we passed the seven hundred, the six hundred, the five hundred. Then a moment of darkness and a rush of sweet fresh air, and at last a glare of daylight. We stepped forth into the world again, and never did it seem so pleasant.
